DEATH QUICKLY CLAIMS THREE VICTIMS

IN AWFUL AUTO ACCIDENT AT LEISTVILLE SATURDAY

Two Women and One Man Die From Result of Auto Collision At Intersection of Adelphi, Maysville and Zanesville Pikes, Seven Miles East of This City, Saturday Evening At 6:30 O'clock—Accident Due To Speeding Car.

In a collision of two automobiles Saturday evening at six-thirty o'clock at Leistville, one woman, Mrs. Bryan Riffle, was killed instantly and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Eliza Paxton Riffle, who was in the same car, was so badly injured internally that she died Sunday morning at six o'clock and Edward Laughlin, of Newark was so badly hurt that he died Sunday night at midnight.

The accident, which was one of the worst in the history of the county, occurred at the intersection of the Adelphi and the Zanesville and Maysville turnpikes.

In the Riffle machine were Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Riffle and their baby, Thomas Edward, a child eight months old, their niece, Eleanor Timmons, daughter of Mrs. Lloyd Martin, and Mrs. Eliza Paxton Riffle, mother of Bryan Riffle. The last named was driving and the family was coming to this city to do their shopping.

Mr. Riffle was driving a Studebaker touring car and as he neared the cross roads, he saw bearing down on him an Essex coach coming from the east at a high rate of speed, and before he could stop, the coach rammed into his machine just as both reached the center of the intersecting highways.

The impact was so great that both automobiles were reduced to a mass of junk, and the steel parts were twisted out of all semblance of their former shape.

In the Essex were five men; Edward Laughlin, Louis Swinehart, Herbert Stark, Clarence Schmidt and Robert McBryan, all of Newark, who were on their way to Chillicothe to attend a Moose convention.

Mr. Swinehart and Mr. Laughlin were knocked unconscious, both suffered concussions and their skulls were fractured. The two injured men were brought to this city and were taken to the office of Dr. D. V. Courtright and later to the Home and hospital, where they received surgical treatment by Dr. Courtright, who was assisted by District Nurse Miss Charlotte Phelps and Nurse Miss Marvene Ryan, of this city.

Herbert Stark, a member of the Newark party, sustained a fracture of his left arm. The other two escaped with only slight injuries, and the three returned to their homes on Saturday evening.

Mr. Swinehart, who is a retired policeman, will probably recover. Mr. Laughlin was a widower, about sixty years of age and the father of two sons and two daughters. His brother and wife and one son and one daughter were with him Sunday and the last named were at his bedside when the end came.

The body was taken to his home in Newark Monday morning. This is the third fatality in the Riffle family. Martin Riffle, a stepson of Mrs. Eliza Paxton Riffle, who died Sunday morning, was killed at the Mound street crossing of the Pennsylvania railroad some years ago.

One son and six daughters survive. They are Bryan Riffle, Mrs. Millard Patrick, Miss Bessie Riffle, Mrs. Josie Kinser, Mrs. Rose Ehnie, of London, Mrs. Myrtle Kinser, of Duvall, and Mrs. Martha Martin, of near this city.

Of her immediately family, four brothers and three sisters survive. They are Noah, Robert and William Paxton, of this city; Joseph Paxton, of Hocking county; Mrs. Edward Valentine, of this city; Mrs. Minnie Seesholtz, of Bremen, and Mrs. Nancy Hunter, of Hocking county.

The funeral services will be held from the Morris United Brethren church, Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Lewis Hampshire, of Westerville. Interment in the Hitler-Ludwig cemetery.

Mrs. Bryan Riffle. Mrs. Bryan Riffle was born in Columbus in 1891. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Waits, of Kingston. Her mother, who also survives, is now married to Isaac Rossiter, Whisler.

She was married to Bryan Riffle, September 12, 1925. Besides her husband, she leaves a baby son, Thomas Edward, eight months old.

The funeral services will be held from the Whisler church Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock. Burial in the cemetery at Whisler. The body was taken to the home of her mother, Mrs. Isaac Rossiter, Sunday morning.

Edward Laughlin. The third victim of the accident was born at Jewett, this state, April 2, 1867. His wife, who was Miss Jennie Simmons, died in 1908. He was employed at the Woerhle stove foundry at Newark.

He is survived by two sons, Thomas Laughlin, of Detroit, Michigan and W. L. Laughlin of Jewett; and three daughters; Mrs. Harold Alloway, of Newark; Mrs. Clyde Cole, of Kalamazoo, Michigan and Miss Laura Laughlin, of Detroit, Michigan.

His son, Thomas Laughlin and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Alloway were present when Mr. Laughlin passed away. The remains will be taken to Jewett for burial.

Of his immediately family two brothers and one sister survive. They are R. A. Laughlin, of Knoxville, Pennsylvania; Clyde Laughlin, of Youngstown and Mrs. O. S. McCurdy of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Laughlin was a member of the Royal Order of the Moose and also a member of the Moose Legion.

COL. W. B. LADUE

Col. William B. Ladue, recently appointed engineer commissioner for the District of Columbia, who succeeded Col. J. Franklin Bell. He was born at Adrian, Mich., and educated at the University of Minnesota and West Point Military academy.

Mrs. James Stout and Mrs. Clarence Wolf were visitors in Columbus today.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Delaware—With scarcely any tangible clues, Sheriff Connor Lambert, said today he would attempt to check the movements of A. J. Purgett, 33, Lorain railroad, prior to his apparent murder some time Saturday or early Sunday. Purgett's body was found in a ditch on a side road one mile west of Sunbury, by passing motorists, yesterday.

Cleveland—Of this I am convinced that the young girl of today, in spite of her disposition toward dissipation is far healthier and physically fit than the sedate girl of the past.

Lorain—In one of Lorain's most spectacular fires, the Cities Service Oil Co., burned to the ground late last night, with an estimated damage of $50,000. Shooting flames and smoke high into the air the fire raged for two hours, until the four companies which had responded to the alarm had it in check.

Cleveland—Funeral services will be held Tuesday for Hugh Huntington Howard, Cleveland artist, who died here Sunday in his home. Death followed a paralytic stroke suffered a week ago. As a painter of landscape and marine scenes Howard gained a national reputation.

Tiffin—Charged with obtaining money by false pretenses, T. M. Gregory Jr., of Akron, is free under $300 awaiting grand jury action here. Gregory was arrested upon complaint of Mrs. Mary Nick who charges he obtained $1200 from her several years ago by fraudulent misrepresentation of the value of stock in a rubber company. He appeared in justice court.

Van Wert—Hearing to have been held Saturday for Thomas Wade, 21, Harrison township, held in jail one charge of attempting to poison his foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dorcas Morehead, was delayed until Monday. Hearing is to be held before Justice A. C. Gilpin, in the complaint fully made the grade will, within a charged Wade put poison in milk.

"Piccadilly"

There is some difference of opinion concerning the derivation of the name "piccadilly." It is believed to be from "piccadills," the small stiff collars affected by men of fashion of the time of James I. The street was named for the house of entertainment known as "Piccadilly house."

NINE INJURED AUTOMOBILES IN COLLISION

Accident Occurred on the National Road When Three Machines Came Together.

Nine persons were injured, five seriously, in a triple automobile collision on the National pike near South Vienna, 11 miles east of Springfield.

Melvin Tingley, 8, sustained a fractured skull and his condition is regarded as serious. Mrs. Barbara Collins, 46, 312 Donaldson street, Columbus, was badly cut about the head and face and her right eye was destroyed. Mrs. Elizabeth Paul, 60 Akron, sustained a dislocated shoulder and arm and Harry Baughman, 35, Barberton, received severe cuts and probable rupture of the spine.

Mrs. Minnie Dillon, 53, Plumwood, was cut about the head and is reported injured internally. Those who received slight injuries are Steve Botkinns, London; Mrs. Edna Baughman, Barberton; Ruth Collins, Columbus, and Isaac Dinnon, London.

The accident occurred when the car driven by Isaac Dillon collided head-on with one driven by Harry Baughman. James Collins, driving behind the Baughman machine, crashed into the wreckage.

STUDENT WAS KILLED NEAR KIRKERSVILLE

Robert Broadfoot, 26, 770 Bellows avenue, Columbus, died Sunday morning in Grant hospital from a fractured skull and internal injuries suffered in an automobile accident Saturday night on the National highway near Kirkersville.

Broadfoot's automobile collided head-on with the auto driven by Hubbard Lindenberg, 1122 Cambridge place, who suffered a broken hand, according to the police.

He was a senior in the college of engineering at Ohio State university and was a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity.

DEMENTED MAN.

Andrew Slash, colored, evidently a demented man, was picked up on the Island road by Deputy Sheriff John Ward Jr., Saturday evening and was placed in the county jail.

NEW LAWYER.

Emmitt Littleton Crist, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Crist, Saturday evening received a telegram from Judge Frank Gusweiler, of Cincinnati, informing him that he had passed with high honors the examination for admission to the bar.

Mr. Crist, together with the other disciples of Blackstone who successfully made the grade fill, within a short time be sworn in by Chief Justice Carrington T. Marshall of the Ohio supreme court.

He will probably open an office in this city for the practice of law.

WILL RULE RUMANIA

Here is the latest photograph of Little Crown Prince Michael, son of Prince Carol of Rumania and grandson of King Ferdinand and Queen Marie. Some day he will be the king of Rumania.

MAYOR'S COURT

Lee Reynolds, wanted for forging a check of $8 drawn on Chris Meinfelter's credit, and cashed at the Betz restaurant was arrested Sunday and put in the calaboose.

Arthur Routt, a drunk, arrested Saturday evening was given a fine of $10 and costs, which he paid and was released.

ASK BIG JUDGMENT.

The Ohio National Life Insurance company, of Columbus, has brought suit against Forest Short to foreclose a mortgage on 1,432 acres of land in Ross county, amount claimed is $41,400.

DOCTOR LEIST GIVES UP LIFE TO RESCUE SON

Former Kingston Physician Goes to a Watery Grave Sunday.

Dr. Joseph W. Leist, formerly of Kingston, son of Amos Leist, lost his life in the Olentangy river at Columbus Sunday in an endeavor to save his son from drowning.

While Dr. Leist was battling to save the boy, two other sons, George 6, and Joseph 11, stood horrified and helpless on the bank, watching a picnic breakfast turning into a tragedy.

John, too, probably would have been a victim, had not Don Miller, 19 of Chicago, who is visiting his uncle T. J. O'Neil, 88 East Oakland avenue, arrived just after Dr. Leist slipped from a ledge into deep water and left John floundering. Miller completed the rescue of John, who was little the worse for his experience.

Dr. Leist had been in the water 10 or 15 minutes and after gaining a footing on the ledge had stood there with the water around his shoulder holding John in safety. When he slipped off into the deeper water he was too exhausted to make further fight for life. The body remained in the water about 45 minutes before being recovered.

With his three boys, Dr. Leist went to the riverside for an early outdoor breakfast, expecting to return home about 10 o'clock. While he was preparing breakfast at 7 a. m. the boys wandered down to the river's brink. A moment later he was attracted by the screams of the two brothers that John was in the water.

Without hesitation the father plunged in to rescue his son. Because of the early morning hour the neighborhood was deserted.

Dr. Leist was born at Kingston and was a graduate of Bellevue hospital, New York. He was assistant professor in the medical college at Ohio State university. His widow, Mrs. Laura Leist, his father, Amos Leist, Kingston; a half brother, Robert Leist, Cleveland and a half sister, Mrs. James Wright, also survive.

H. EBELING PASSED AWAY IN COLUMBUS

Herman Ebeling, 77, 726 Franklin avenue and well known here, one of Ohio's veteran musicians, died at 5:45 p. m. Sunday in Dr. Harding's sanitarium, Worthington, from heart trouble, following a second attack of bronchitis. He was ill for a week.

Mr. Ebeling taught in Columbus for more than 40 years and some of the best known pianists were his pupils.

His widow, Mrs. Marie Ebeling; two daughters, Mrs. Albert Cook, 125 Parkwood avenue; and Miss Ruth Ebeling, and a grandson, survive.

Funeral services Tuesday at 2:30 p. m., at the residence. Burial in Green Lawn cemetery.

Relieving Body's Tension

French gymnastics are to make the body flexible and to free it from habits of muscular tension, and relaxing exercises are used. These consist in making absolutely limp one part of the body after another, and finally the whole at once by removing all tension from the articulation. These exercises are followed by a series of energizing or vitalizing movements, slow and rhythmic.

OHIO PAROLE VIOLATOR HARD HIT BY RULING

Turner Says Returned Prisoners
Must Serve Maximum Sentences.

Parole violators and habitual criminals are hard hit in a decision handed down to the Ohio board of clemency by Attorney General Edward C. Turner which declares that a parole violator returned to the Ohio penitentiary must serve his maximum sentence and will not be eligible for parole, and that no prisoner can be released from serving one sentence to start serving on another.

For example, a prisoner serving a one to 30 year sentence and paroled after serving one year, must, if he violates his parole, serve the remainder of the sentence and cannot be paroled. The time he served before being paroled and the time out on parole count on the sentence, but he must serve the 30 years, according to the ruling.

If he commits a felony while on parole he must serve out his first sentence, no difference how long it is, before he starts on the second sentence.

Paroles are from one to three years, after which the prisoner if he has conducted himself properly is given his release by the board, as provided by law.

There are now 491 prisoners on parole. In the penitentiary now there are 73 prisoners whose paroles were revoked and who have been returned to prison, and caught under the ruling they must serve their maximum sentences. Revocation of paroles range anywhere from a month to two years, at the end of which time the board would hear the prisoner again to decide whether he should be re-paroled.

"It is my opinion that Section 2175 in no wise grants authority to the board of clemency to release a prisoner who has been paroled and has been convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary for a new crime from serving any part of his first sentence in order to begin serving the second sentence before the maximum term of the first sentence has been served," Mr. Turner's opinion said.

In relation to habitual criminals, this ruling is regarded by officials here as deep biting as the Baumes law of New York, which automatically sentences a fourth offender for life.

The Main One

"Yes," said the lawyer, "you go through bankruptcy and it will relieve you of all your financial burdens."

"That so?" said the man who was in trouble. "And what becomes of her?"

"Her? What do you mean?"

"My wife, of course."—Boston Transcript.

GREEN REBUKES

Martinez Attack On Monroe
Doctrine Ruled Out.

Washington, July 22.—An attack upon the Monroe Doctrine by Venezuelan delegate Rafael Martinez before the Pan-American Federation of Labor conference today was peremptorily stopped by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, presiding officer, who ruled Martinez out of order and rebuked him.

Martinez denounced "American intervention in Nicaragua," saying that if the Pan-American labor body did not take a stand against the Monroe Doctrine, those participating in the deliberations here would have nothing to show to the Latin-American countries.

Martinez was interrupted by Green, who said the question before the body referred to Haiti, not Nicaragua. Martinez leaped to his feet and shouted that "the criminal exploitation of Latin-American countries began back in the days of Monroe."

Their Private Fish Pond

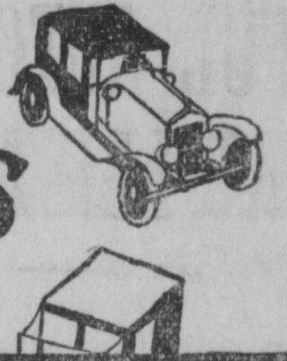

About every third fish in the North sea ends by being eaten either in England or in Holland. If you drop a ring, either in Boston or in London, your chance of seeing it again is very small. But if you will send it to the English fishery board, they will tie it to the tail of a fish and let it loose in the North sea; and every third time you will get your ring back.—Alfred North Whitehead in the Atlantic Monthly.

C. & H. WORKMAN

Instantly Killed By Bolt of Lightning In Ross County.

Lightning struck and instantly killed Albert Beechler, 53, 677 North High street, while Beechler was at work as a laborer on the Chesapeake & Hocking construction in Green township, 8 or 9 miles above Chillicothe, Thursday afternoon at three o'clock.

When the heavy hail and rain storm came up, Beechler, along with fellow workmen, rushed to shelter. In his hurry, Beechler forgot his coat. Once in the shelter, Beechler was reminded of his coat and started across an open space to get it.

As he hurried across the field, the bolt of lightning struck him. His companions, blinded partially by the flash, did not see him fall. They realized that the lightning had either struck Beechler or so close to him that he was stunned. They went out to the body and found that Beechler was dead.

The lightning bolt struck Beechler directly on top of the head. His cap was torn in two from the center through the heavy band in the rear. Beechler was wearing a blue denim work jacket and it and his shirt were ripped to shreds by the force of the bolt. Although Beechler's clothing or cap were unburned, the hair on top of his head was slightly singed.

The lightning bolt did not stop Beechler's watch, the time-piece evidently not being affected by the electric charge.

Beechler was born in Ross county on April 29, 1874, the son of Adam and Margaret Beechler. He was a member of the Four-Square Gospel church.

His wife, Bertha, three sons, Donald, Howard and Delbert, and two daughters, Mrs. Earl Kedash, city, and Mrs. Cecil Storts, city; two brothers, Watt Beechler and Zina Beechler, both of Upper Twin township, and two sisters, Mrs. Ossie Clouser, city and Miss Lillie Beechler, Columbus, survive him.

Funeral services will be held Saturday, 10 a. m. from the residence, Rev. Thelma Routt officiating. Interment will be made in South Salem cemetery.—Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

THE 1926 TAX VALUATION OF OHIO

Under an act passed in 1925, all counties in Ohio were required to re-appraise their real estate for taxation, unless complete re-appraisements had been made within the previous three years. In accordance with this act, 75 of the 88 counties of the state have been re-appraised within the last two years. In many counties this was the first complete re-valuation of real property since 1910, though partial re-appraisements had been made at various times.

Hereafter each county must be re-appraised at least once in every six years. The appraisalment of property is handled by the county auditor subject to supervision and review by the state tax commission.

As a result of re-appraisalment and the natural growth of values, the tax list of the state rose from $12,680,000,000 in 1925 to $13,350,000,000 in 1926, an increase of 5.3 per cent.

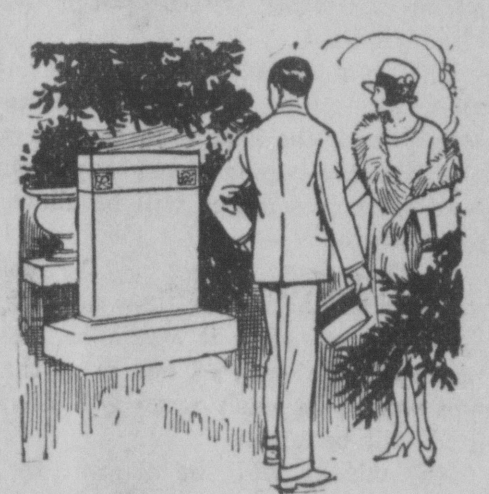

Not only is real estate responsible for most of the growth in tax values, but urban real estate in particular represents by far the major part of the increase in the last year. Out of a total rise of $637,000,000 in real estate appraisements in 1926, the increase in real estate valuations in cities and villages amounted to $498,000,000, as compared with $139,000,000 outside of municipalities. In the 65 counties which completed their re-appraisements in 1926, the valuation of real estate outside of municipalities rose 9.1 per cent and within municipalities 19.6 per cent.

In Pickaway County real estate appraisements were increased from $37,000,000 to $40,000,000 by the 1926 appraisalment.

Have Different Meanings

The words "practicable" and "practical" are sometimes confused in usage. "Practicable" is that which is capable of being accomplished, while "practical" refers to that which can actually be turned to account. For instance, aerial navigation is "practicable" on a small scale; it is not yet a "practical" means of ordinary communication.

There are flowers whose common names have become a poem in all ears that know English poetry; cowslip, primrose, pansy, daffodil, violet, mayflower—we know them well. Entering Poorhouse, Meets Deserted Wife

Lancaster, Ohio. — Charles Trotter, seventy-six, traveled "over the hill to the poorhouse" here and at the door of the institution met his wife, Bertha, seventy-three, whom he deserted 56 years ago.

The woman, who says he deserted her as a child-wife, has been an inmate of the institution since 1871, when she became ill from worry over her abandonment and the death of her infant child.

During the 56 years Trotter wandered the face of the earth. While seeking his fortune in the West he was falsely informed of her death and never returned until, broken in old age and destitute, the poorhouse became the trail's end for him.

His bride of more than half a century ago recognized him. When asked by the matron if she still cared for him she replied: "No, he left me when I needed him the most—he need not have returned."

KANSAS WOMAN PREFERS "SODDY" TO MODERN HOME

Says It Has Many Pleasant Memories for Her and Refuses to Give It Up.

Quinter, Kan.—In the center of this town of 1,000 population and one block from the post office is one of the original "soddies" of Gove county.

The owner, Mrs. Mary Springer, seventy-nine, refuses to abandon it for the reason, she says, it is warmer in winter and cooler in summer than its modern frame, brick and stucco neighbors. However, Mrs. Springer compromised with present-day modernization of the home and her pioneer abode has comforts and conveniences little dreamed of by her and her husband when they built the sod house, said to be the first dwelling in Gove county 30 years ago.

There are electric lights and a piano. The walls and ceiling are papered and carpets cover the floors of the four rooms. Vines and shrubs almost conceal the earthen wall material of the front of the house, while within doors the furnishings are very much the same as in any other residence of persons in well-to-do circumstances.

Mrs. Springer has four married children, two sons and four daughters, all of whom have pleaded with their mother to live with them. But Mrs. Springer won't listen to their entreaties.

"My husband and I lived more than a score of years in this house and old associations and memories count for a great deal," Mrs. Springer explained to a visitor. "I am happy here, so why leave? Besides, I have my garden and chickens to keep me busy."

"You see, a lot of persons here depend on me for their chickens and eggs. Then my life-long friend, Mrs. Sophia Baird, who is alone in the world, too, lives with me. We are contented and have plenty to do."

Mrs. Springer and her husband, the late Henry Springer, came to Kansas from Warren county, Mo. Mr. Springer died seven years ago. The husband of Mrs. Sophia Baird, who makes her home with Mrs. Springer, has been dead eight years. The two women prepare their own meals, do their own housework and work a garden. Mrs. Baird is one of the first settlers of Gove county, moving there in 1832.

Dallas, Texas.—While collecting bills in the office of an insurance agent here Isaac Baskowitz's eyes were attracted to an art calendar on the wall.

The calendar bore the likeness of a pretty girl. Baskowitz was amazed at the resemblance to a younger sister from whom he was separated in Russia ten years ago.

He studied the picture and decided to investigate. The calendar bore the name of the lithographer. Baskowitz communicated with him and learned that the subject was none other than his sister, Gertrude, who is now eighteen years old. Baskowitz is en route to New York to greet the girl.

Cow Rustlers Use Autos

Martinez, Calif.—Cattle rustlers in the Contra Costa hills have adopted modern improvements. They now carry on their felonious activities in flivvers, instead of on horseback, as in the olden days. If Mrs. William Ward of Danville is correct in her suspicions.

Reporting the theft of two blooded bulls worth $800 each from her Black Hawk farm, Mrs. Ward told the sheriff she believed the animals were purloined by a man she saw drive up to the ranch in a small automobile.

There have been a number of cases of cattle rustling in Contra Costa county reported recently.

GIVE PRIZE FOR NAMING PARLOR CAR

The Scioto Valley Will Give Twenty-Five Dollars in Gold For the Best Suggestion.

The Scioto Valley Railway and Power company will, on August first, add another car to the limited parlor car service on this division.

The new car will be number 110. This with number 115, now in service will increase the northbound parlor car to six parlor car trips and the southbound to five daily.

This additional car is luxuriously finished, the woodwork is in cherry and is furnished with green leather chairs and green rugs. The observation end is of plate glass and is equipped with awning. The exterior finish of the car is orange.

The company has asked the people of Circleville and Pickaway county to suggest an appropriate name and slogan for this new car and has offered a prize of $25 in gold to the one whose suggestion is selected.

The first limited parlor car has proven its worth and it is believed that this additional service will meet the approval and requirements of the traveling public, as there have been many requests for this increased equipment.

This will necessitate a complete change in the schedules of the Traction company, for the reason that the parlor car limiteds will take the place of the locals at the same hour out of the terminals.

The Scioto Valley Railway and Power company, has always striven to furnish pleasant, adequate service and deserves the support of the city and county. The company gives employment to many of our people and is a substantial contributor to county and city funds as a payer of taxes. Competition in the carrying of passengers and freight is fierce, and this effort on the part of the Traction company to furnish comfortable, safe, certain and speedy service should be appreciated by all our people and should be encouraged in every possible way.

We understand, thru J. O. Bradford, general passenger and freight agent, that the company will stage a contest to determine the most appropriate name for the new limited parlor car which will be put in service August 1.

This contest will be open to every man, woman or child in Pickaway county with the exception that no employee of the company nor any members of their families will be allowed to compete.

To the person suggesting the most appropriate name for the new car, and accompanying it with the most appropriate slogan of not more than five words, a cash prize of $25 in gold will be given.

The winner will be chosen by a committee of the Circleville Chamber of Commerce named by the president and all coupons should be mailed to Karl Herrmann, secretary.

Beginning Tuesday a coupon will be printed in the Union-Herald for five days and the contest will close August 10.

Clip the coupon. Mail your suggestion to the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. You may win the prize. Watch the Union-Herald Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday for the coupons.

RISK DEATH TO DELIVER MAIL

U. S. Air Pilots Constantly Baset by Dangers, Archives Reveal.

Washington.—Everyone entering or leaving Washington cannot help being struck by these words carved high on the pediment of the United States Post Office building:

"Neither snow, nor rain, nor heat, nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds."

These lines, written by Herodotus, probably describe better than any contemporary the glory which every American attaches to the air mail service since Col. Charles A. Lindbergh made his flight. Yet they were not written with any New York-to-Paris flight in mind, but as a compliment to the couriers of Cyrus the Great hundreds of years before the birth of Christ, writes H. Cabot Lodge, Jr., in the New York Herald-Tribune.

Colonel Lindbergh has shown us that they are not an overstatement, but how many of us realize that hidden in the yellowing archives of the Post Office department are reports of air mail flyers who by their thoughtless bravery justified that tribute before Colonel Lindbergh became the cynosure of all eyes?

The reports of air mail pilots in the Post Office department reflect that very humor, heroism and modesty which every one now exalts in Colonel Lindbergh. The corps to which he belongs is a magnificent background for him, and more should be known about these men who risk their lives throughout the twenty-four hours so that a business letter may reach San Francisco on time.

It is hard to make a selection from the wealth of material in the archives of the Post Office department. One first of all is struck by the many humorous incidents connected with the air mail service, which are all too often coupled with desperate flights against the elements in a Rocky mountain gorge.

Wants Ride if Plane Is Safe.

Here is a worthy on a Utah ranch who makes this unique contribution to the division superintendent:

"Your flying machines pass over my ranch nearly every day and I am quite interested in them. If they are absolutely safe I would like to take a ride some day when I come up to Salt Lake. I noticed one passing the other day which didn't have any propeller on. It seemed to be in a terrible hurry to get to Salt Lake to get another propeller."

Then there are stories of planes which land on rabbits and of eagles which land on planes and are pursued by their mates. One eagle got caught in a strut of the plane's wing and when removed the pilot was incensed to find that it had a wing spread of eight feet and weighed eight pounds.

A novel version of Charles A. Dana's definition of news is recorded when a dog tried to bite an airplane at the Concord (Calif.) field. The propeller cut the dog's head off and flung it in the face of a nearby pilot with such force as to cut a large gash in his face.

But these humorous anecdotes are only the flavoring for the real bulk of the story of everyday heroism which these records contain. There is "Red" Andert, for instance, one of Lindbergh's brothers in arms on the route from Salt Lake City to Pisco, Wash. One night last December "Red"—his real name is Paul—had some rough riding, which is told in the following report by his division superintendent:

"Andert hit the mountain ranges covered solid with heavy fog. He stuck his nose into it, but couldn't see the end of his wing, so changed his mind then and there. No breaks in the fog for over thirty miles—but he wouldn't come back. Landed on a highway leading through a pass and started taxiing to the summit. His progress may not have been so 'swift,' but it was 100 per cent complete."

Roads "Bad" for Planes.

The report then explains the difficulties of driving over mountain roads in an airplane, and then states that "Red" was stopped because one of the wings of his plane hit a post.

"Then he walked several miles," the report continued, "and hired a Ford truck to tow him over the saddle. Got sufficient visibility to take off—right off the road. Another hour of flying and more fog. No road to land on this time, but there was a river deep down between steep walls on either side. He made for it, flying under the bank of fog just above the water. Thirty miles of this. Then the fog lifted."

"Andert was now in unfamiliar territory. Over another mountain covered with fog and landed at a farmhouse to get location. The house, he found, was empty. While he had gone to the house his idling motor had stopped. The main gasoline tank was dry, but there were ten gallons of gas in the emergency tank. From the time he had been out and the way his compass had been spinning he could have been in Colorado, Wyoming, Oregon or possibly Idaho, where he was supposed to be."

"He started out again and soon hit a clear space and familiar territory. Arrived in Boise, having been out eight hours for a trip of a little more than 300 miles."

Another pilot, C. K. Vance, by name, ran into a snow storm on the Nevada-

California state line in the middle of jagged mountain peaks.

"After trying for three hours to break through," so runs the official report, "he found himself in the center of the storm, with fuel low and darkness coming on. He landed in an open space covered with six feet of brush without injury to himself. He started out in the storm to the mining camp at Last Chance."

Spends Night in Snow.

"Making little headway, he decided he couldn't reach the camp, and, therefore, started a fire between two fallen trees and spent the night there in the snow. At daybreak he started for the mining camp and reached it about 7 o'clock. Accompanied by miners, he started back to the ship with pack mules, for the mail, which was delivered at Colfax post office at 9:30 that night. Meanwhile all planes in the vicinity were searching for him, as there are no telephone facilities at Last Chance."

A veteran of the Salt Lake City-San Francisco loop, Pilot C. Eugene, "Johnny" Johnson, had a harrowing experience last February, which he describes in the following terms:

"Across Sacramento valley I had a ceiling of about 2,000 feet, with light rain most of the way. Troy and Reno weather reports not unfavorable and I could see mountain tops on the hump (this means the Sierra Nevada), just before landing at Mather field."

"Was forced onto the railroad two or three miles east of American canyon, at which point the rain had turned to snow. The dark leeward sides of the snowsheds made a good mark to follow, in the snowstorm until I reached a point about Troy, where I lost sight of everything."

"Circled several times trying to get on, but gave up. Decided to return to Mather, but was only able to return a mile or two. It had closed in behind me and the going was not too good in between these points. Was gradually forced to the floor of the canyon, much below the level of the railroad, and finally was limited to a tight spiral. In order to see the ground at all,

"By this time the lower wing was just clearing the trees and the rocks and the exceedingly rough going made things quite impossible. Saw a cleared space of perhaps a hundred yards between the trees and tried to park the wreck in this space, but due to rough air and rotten visibility I was unable to judge my turn so that I could head into it. Missed it three times."

Parked in the Trees.

"Was in practically a vertical bank all the time and finally decided that clear space or not, I had to get down. Cut out switches and parked in the trees. Broke off a pine tree at the snow-line about 18 inches in diameter. Apparently in the air when I struck it, for the ship piled up a washout 30 feet beyond the tree in one mass."

"When a plane 'piles up a washout' it means in ordinary English that it has been completely wrecked."

"I had lost my sense of direction," Johnson continues, "so with the aid of a pocket compass I headed south. The snow was 10 to 15 inches deep and I was told later that 40 inches of it had fallen in the preceding 24 hours. My snowshoes sank into it for at least a foot every step. This, added to the fact that there was a 45 to 50 degree slope covered with crevasses, made the going pretty bad. It was for this reason that it took me so long to get word to Reno."

"After four hours of climbing I picked up the railroad and started hiking west—down grade. Found a telephone in a snowshed about a mile away."

There are many more fascinating tales in the archives of the Post Office department, all showing a similar picturesqueness and insouciance. Some get killed and many take mortal chances, but the mail is delivered regardless of risk.

Dead of Canadian Army

Washington.—Selection of a site in Arlington cemetery for a monument to be presented by Canada to the American government in commemoration of Americans killed in the World War while serving with Canadian units was begun the other day by a commission from Ottawa. The monument will be known as "The Cross of Sacrifice."

The delegation consisted of Col. H. C. Osborn of the Canadian department of national defense, and Ernest H. Scammell, assistant deputy minister and secretary of the department of soldiers' civil re-establishment. They conferred with the War department officials and visited the cemetery, accompanied by Merchant Mahoney, commercial secretary of the Canadian legation.

Huge Lumber Savings by New Inventions

Washington.—Devices which the National Lumber Manufacturers' association says will save 100,000,000 feet of timber annually by elimination of waste have been perfected as the result of an invention contest sponsored by that organization.

The first prize of $1,900 was for an invention known as the "multiple guide dimension mill." A second of $500 was for an automatically operated scale and indicator attachment for saw mill edgers; three awards of $100 each and four of $50 also were announced.

IN MEMORIAM

Editor Union-Herald: — Charles Lincoln Daily, son of Charles and Abigail Daily was born at Waverly, Ohio, July 23, 1866, and died July 17, 1922, aged 60 years, 11 months and 24 days.

He leaves two sisters, Mrs. Jonas Warner, of Ashville, and Miss Lizzie, at home, and three brothers; John and Ralph, of Chillicothe, and David, at home. Two brothers; Daniel W., of Kansas, and William B., of Springfield township, Ross county, died years ago. There are also several nieces and nephews.

Charles L. Daily resided in Pickaway county for many years and was engaged in farming which he carried on quite extensively. About twenty years ago he, with a brother and a sister, moved to Ross county, which he served as sealer of weights. Thru this office he became quite well known over the entire county.

He was public spirited, the founder of Elmdale grange and worthy master for several years. He was also a member of the Winnetka tribe of the order of Red Men, of Tucson, Ohio.

Honest, truthful, kind and generous hearted, he won the highest respect and confidence of all who knew him. The neighbors, as well as his family, will miss him sadly for in sickness and in health he was always ready and willing to render assistance.

During the last two years he had read and studied God's word. He was in possession of the "Old Family Bible" in which many rich verses and passages had been marked by his father's hand and in his last weeks of suffering when he was unable to read, he deeply enjoyed those beautiful verses as his sister read them to him over and over again. Thus he experienced a change of heart, and the sacred words that had been his father's strength and comfort, became his rod and staff, when the shadows lengthened, and he entered the dark valley of the shadow of death and he was not afraid.

A few weeks ago he chose his pallbearers, his minister and requested them to use for his service the text used at his father's funeral. A verse from that wonderful Psalm which had been in the hearts of so many of God's chosen ones when they entered the dark valley.

The funeral services were held at the late home on Tuesday, July 19, conducted by Rev. Mr. Cooper, of Richmondale, and Rev. Mr. Haas, of Lilly Chapel, Madison county. Interment in Jackson township cemetery, Pickaway county.

THIN OIL MAKES BANDS GRAB

After the oil in the crankcase becomes diluted with gas and is thin the motor is not properly lubricated and the transmission bands have a tendency to grab. The oil should be drained every 500 or 600 miles to obtain the best results from your motor. Let us drain the oil and put in a gallon of WARCO, the proper lubricant for your Ford car that eliminates band chatter.

Goose Quill Thrives Among Paris Writers

Paris.—The typewriter today is generally accepted by American authors as the quickest and most satisfactory method of setting their thoughts on paper. But in France, where art is still spelled with a capital letter, much of the literary output is from quill pens. The goose quill is a standard article at stationery stores.

The importance of quills came to light recently when a newspaper conducted a campaign among writers to discover whether they were music lovers. Many of the literary people asserted that to their ears the sweetest music was the squeaking of their quill pens.

Such Ignorance

A farmer's boy brought a cowhide to the village produce dealer and asked what the price was for hides.

"Is it a green hide?" asked the dealer.

"Naw," replied the boy disgustedly, "they ain't no green cows. The one this skin came off was a brindle."

FOLKSBURG ITEMS

Several people from other places have been visiting their relatives in Folksburg lately, and some of them we can impress a good deal showing them the sights of our town, while others from bigger places, why we mostly urge them just to take a good rest out in the back yard and quiet their jumpy nerves. From which you might say we've got something to offer any of them.

Sidney Moon's daughter, Minnie, is wanting to go up to the city and spend a week or two with some people she knows. But Sidney is trying to talk her out of it for the reason that he knows she'll come back with a lot of new ideas that'll cost him money.

It sure has been hot in Folksburg since our last writing, and it seems like we never did see the heat waves sizzling down the way they have been along about noon every day. And several have claimed they can smell burning rubber all over town from rubber heels being scorched on the sidewalks.

Andy Dobbins is still somewhat concerned over the report that he said we needed a new Town Board. He's afraid it might work out against him on his job of carrying the mail back and forth to the postoffice, and he claims all he said was that we've got a sure enough self-governed town, which he didn't mean in any derogatory sense toward anybody.

Miss Mellie Robbins got a crick in her neck yesterday that was very painful for a while. And how it happened was she was trying to turn her head around too much to see did her new slippers look all right behind.

Earl Smiley was over at Albany last Saturday, and he's been telling how he met several people that he seemed to attract their attention so much. He wondered modestly if they thought he had a distinguished look, but Sam Price told him it might be they thought he resembled somebody there's a reward out for.

Somebody mentioned recently that most people nowadays all follow the fixed style, and try to look and act as near alike as they can except for a few things like the color of their eyes or their waist measure which they can't change. And seems like nobody has the nerve to come out and be themselves the way they once did. Which maybe it's a good thing, but it limits the subjects for conversation a lot.

Mrs. Felix Cobb is spending the week over at Nashville. And before she started Felix asked her to write back and tell him what she thought of the place, which she did soon after she got there by sending a card saying she wished she was back home.

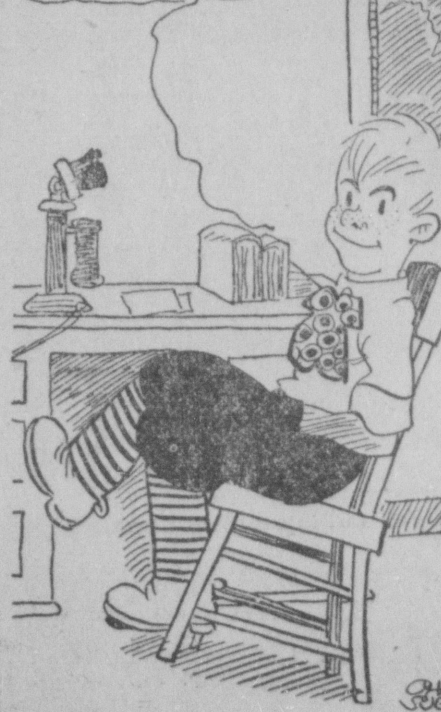

Lewis Jackson got another letter yesterday from his boy, Charlie, who is up in the city, and it said he had lost his job. And the reason was that where he worked the boss was in and out a good deal, and Charlie couldn't seem to get on to the knack of beating the boss back in by a minute or two.

Frank Fillmore, who moved to Newport a few years ago, visited in Folksburg last week. He was complaining some that he's only making $5.50 a day where he works now, and he can't see how he's going to support his family on that. And then somebody remarked that he surely can't manage as good as his father, who raised a family of ten over in Polk county, and never did make over a dollar a day in his life.

Harry Harmon sold his fivver the other day to a party east of town, and the way it's been running since he let it go, he's worried that he sold it too cheap. He'd feel a lot relieved if it would take a few spells like it used to, and not act so dependable.

The boxer came to the doctor with a black eye and a broken nose.

"Did this happen while you were training?" asked the doctor.

The boxer laughed: "No, they can't touch me."

"You were set on in the street?"

"No."

"Then I don't understand."

The boxer breathed heavily: "My wife proved to me that she couldn't possibly go on wearing last year's hat."—Vancouver Province.

A Sinister Heritage

A certain woman who is proud of her aristocratic ancestors happened to show her maid the silhouette of an aunt of hers.

The girl had never seen anything of the kind before, and she gazed at the portrait long and earnestly.

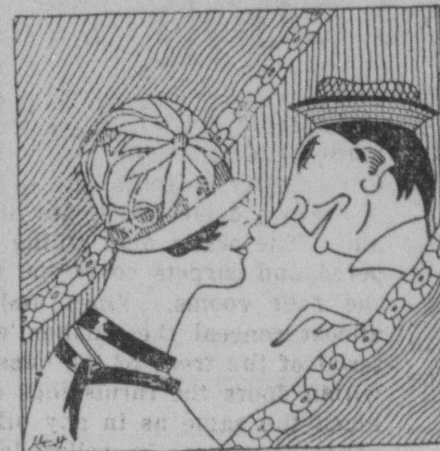

"Lor, mum," she said at length. "I always thought you had some relations like that; you're that dark in the face yourself."—London Tit-Bits.

The Usual Distinction

"I admire determination in a man, don't you?"

"That depends. If it brings success. I praise it as splendid perseverance; if failure, I denounce it as confounded obstinacy."

THEY MADE HIM GIDDY

She—What makes that Mexican friend of yours such a giddy chap?

He—The revolutions he's been through, my dear.

Hymn of Hate

A guy I hate,
I'll tell you, sister,
Is he who calls Himself "uplifter."

Strictly True

Prue—Martha has a beautiful new gown. She says it's from abroad. Doesn't she?

Dolly—Not exactly. It's her last year's dress which she had turned inside out, and she says it's from the other side.

Nothing in a Name

Husband (opening mail)—Hello, here's your dressmaker's account again. I thought I gave you the money for it.

Wife—Oh, that went to pay my bridge losses. Debts of honor first, you know, dear.

A Double Job

Wife—I'm going downtown today to have my face lifted.

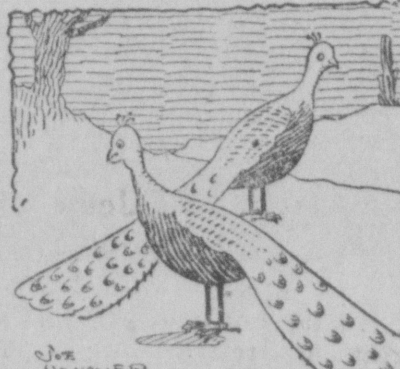

Hub—I'll go with you and while the derrick is set up I'll have my fallen arches raised.

Spoken Like a Man

Wife—Every time you see a pretty girl you forget you're married.

Husband—You're wrong, my dear. Nothing brings home the fact with so much force.

EVOLUTION

First Peacock—What worries you?
Second Peacock—I hope we shall never degenerate into a race without tails.

Fortune Telling

The fortune teller is a bluff
He handeth a sockdolager
As soon as he hath nerve enough
To pose as an astrologer.

Useless Exertion

He—Look at me again, will you?
She—No; because if I do you'll kiss me.

"Honestly, I won't."
"Then what's the use of looking at you?"

AMUSEMENTS

In the role of Rosie O'Reilly, the bewitching belle of Tenth avenue, the diminutive dynamic Clara unfurls some new folds in the banner of fame that spread for her when "IT was flashed on the screens of the world.

"Rough House Rosie" has more action, tense drama and clever comedy crowded into it than five average motion pictures. No word that can be said would speak too highly of it.

From the opening sequence at the amusement beach to the rousing pugilistic encounter at the end "Rough House Rosie" held its audience enthralled. Sandwiched in between are dances, gay parties, bathing pool bits and even one where the innocent and highly indignant Clara spends a night in jail.

Reed Howes gives a fine performance as Joe Hennessey while Doris Hill shows visual evidence of why she is a Paramount contract actress. Others in the supporting cast are Arthur Housman, Douglas Gilmore, Henry Kolker, the Leon Lambert of Bebe Daniels' "A Kiss in a Taxi" and John Miljan.

Frank Strayer, brilliant young director, transferred the story to the screen. It is an adaptation by Max Marcini of Nunnally Johnson's Saturday Evening Post success. The scenario was written by Louise Long and Ethel Doherty.

WILL VISIT "LOST WORLD" OF NOVEL

American Museum Expedition Will Explore Place.

New York.—The scene of Conan Doyle's famous novel and movie, "The Lost World," will be visited and its animal life studied this summer by T. D. Carter and G. H. H. Tate of the American Museum of Natural History, in their expedition to Mount Roraima, Brazil, under the auspices of Lee Garnett Day.

Mount Roraima, which is in the northern tip of Brazil bordering on British Guiana, is an ancient district geologically. With some of the country south of the Amazon it formed a continent ages before the formation of the rest of South America. This was long before the existence of the Amazon river. Later the Amazon divided the old continent, and new land appeared, forming the South America of today.

Mount Roraima consists of a plain from which rises a sugar-loaf mountain with sharp cliffs. The geological structure of the plain differs from that of the mountain. The plain is thought to date back to the preterozoic era, one of the earliest periods in which life is known to have existed. The mountain, however, is of red sandstone, probably of the Jurassic period of the age of reptiles, a much later time.

Because of the early formation of this land, Mount Roraima became one of the first strongholds for mammals and birds when they appeared upon the earth. Little is known of the present-day animal life of this region and it is hoped that the expedition will bring to light some interesting species. The dinosaurs and pterodactyls of Conan Doyle's romance have, of course, been dead for many ages, but relics of archaic mammalian and bird faunas probably haunt the region still.

You will always CHERISH the day that a MAYTAG was delivered to your Home for a trial washing

THOUSANDS of unsolicited testimonial letters from all over the land bear out the foregoing statement. You would be amazed if you could read the stream of unsolicited letters that come in every day from Maytag users who are so pleased with their Maytags that they cannot help writing us how grateful they are that they learned about this wonderful labor saver.

Phone the Maytag Dealer

Use a Maytag next washday without obligation or expense. See big tubfuls washed in 3 to 7 minutes—washed spotlessly clean without hand-rubbing even collar and cuff edges. Maytag dealers everywhere follow the standardized rule of sending a Maytag to a home to do a week's washing free, and without obligation of any kind. This is the way all Maytag Gyrafoam Washers are sold. The Maytag must sell itself solely upon its performance in the home. It must wash everything to your entire satisfaction. Must wash everything quicker, easier and cleaner than other washers. Must wash everything—even collars, cuffs and wristbands, without hand-rubbing. Must prove to you, in your own home, that it is the most helpful home-laundering unit you have ever seen or used.

Mythical Prophetess

Mother Shipton, the reputed English prophetess, is said to have lived in the time of Henry VIII. She is first heard of in 1641 in a pamphlet called "The Prophecies of Mother Shipton." Later many verses of "prophecy" were ascribed to her, and there is room for doubt that she ever existed.

TEX RICKARD

Fight Promoter Proclaims Dempsey-Sharkey Fight the Best Ever.

New York, July 22.—(UP.)—Proclaiming the fight between Jack Dempsey and Jack Sharkey the greatest he had ever seen, Tex Rickard today turned his attention toward the promotion of more bouts calculated to make pugilistic history.

Unperturbed by those who claimed that before Dempsey delivered the knockout blow Thursday night the ex-champion fouled his opponent, Rickard said, "I've seen a great many of 'em but that was the first time I was up there yelling."

The promoter saw the movies of the fight and was satisfied no foul was committed.

"A right hand under the heart and a left to the jaw put Sharkey away," he said.

He said the Dempsey-Tunney fight would be held in mid-September at a place not yet selected.

Slow motion pictures of the fight exhibited privately to newspaper men and others this afternoon left the issue of whether Dempsey fouled Sharkey as wide open to dispute as ever.

Dainty Velvet Jackets for Summer Sports Wear

Virginia Lee Corbin, lovely blonde featured motion picture actress, was Hollywood's first screen artist to adopt the Parisian mode for velvet jackets for sports wear. Miss Corbin's is of brown velvet, tobacco shade, with a shoulder bow of brown taffeta and loose ties of brown flat crepe. The skirt, accordion plaited, is of two shades of brown in flat crepe.

Fashion Suggestions for the Well-Dressed Woman

Along with early summer come outdoor weddings. For the attendants nothing is more suitable than the picturesque garden-party type of frock. This may well be built on "bouffant" lines, suggests the Woman's Home Companion, in which case either taffeta or organdie is recommended. The balance is just a little in favor of organdie, because it is an essentially summery material and this year there is a certain smart bent toward cotton fabrics.

Some young women seem to possess a faculty for wearing a gingham apron or even a nightgown so that it looks like a frock. They are lucky girls. Though their clothes allowances may be meager they always look well. People are not conscious of how long they have worn a hat, because they wear it so becomingly that it never ceases to please the eye. People are not aware of the inexpensiveness of their clothes because they themselves are so much more important than anything they can possibly have on.

Smartness and good dressing are not necessarily the same thing, and neither of them implies being extreme. Being well dressed is a simpler matter than being smart. A well-dressed girl does not need to spend so much money or so much time as a smart girl. Lots of girls are well dressed who could not possibly afford to change their costumes every time the fashions change. And lots of girls are well dressed who are not adapted by physique or temperament to being or looking smart.

To be well dressed it is desirable to have been born with a sense of color and line and appropriateness, to like clothes and to be willing to take pains with them.

The initial choice of clothes is of first importance. The well-dressed woman buys carefully as few and as good clothes as possible. She buys only what suits her and her particular needs, and never buys anything that has no direct relation to something in her wardrobe.

Pique Returns for Summer Sports Dresses

Stress is being placed by the smartest designers on two materials for summer dresses. One is shantung, which is of a specially heavy type lending itself splendidly to the present silhouette, and the other is pique. It is years since the latter has been in favor, but its crisp smartness is sure to make it popular again now it has a start. Many of the pique dresses are trimmed in geometrical designs on one side in a bright color with no trimming at all on the other. Over the dress is worn a pique coat trimmed with braid of the same color as the decorations on the dress.

"Mail-Pouch" Bag Liked by Milady Who Travels

Luggage is an item of great concern to the well-dressed woman en voyage. She realizes that it precedes her onto the train or ship and may establish the keynote of her appearance. She selects that which is newest and smartest, but she never sacrifices convenience. One of her favorites of the season is the "mail-pouch" bag, which is the latest innovation of a famous French luggage maker. This bag is not only unusually chic, but also a perfect "last-minute" accessory, since one may slip into it everything that has been forgotten until the instant of departure.

TEACHER IS MISSING

Police Asked To Help Locate Wooster Girl Lost In South.

Wooster, O., July 22.—Police were asked here today to assist in finding Frances Beckler, 29, school teacher of Delta, O., who has strangely disappeared.

Miss Beckler, who deserted her profession a year ago to sell books, had been working through the winter at Birmingham, Ala., and came North in the spring.

At Memphis, Tenn., she received transportation to Wooster from her district manager. From Wooster she wrote her manager under date of May 1 that she was ill and not able to work. Later her mother failed to get an answer to a letter sent her, and all mail addressed to her at Wooster was returned.

Never "Talk Back" to
This Texas Policeman

Cities everywhere have their silent policemen, but they are made of stone or marble or granite. Coleman, Texas, has a silent policeman in human flesh—Rush Johnigan, fifty-year-old deaf-mute, who weighs 180 pounds, stands erect, dresses well and wears a Texas ten-gallon hat.

For seven years Johnigan has served Coleman efficiently, says the American Magazine, equipped with a .45 automatic, which he has never yet had occasion to use. Generally a tap on the back is enough to cause a law-breaker to yield to this officer, who never argues the case out of court.

Johnigan is on motor vehicle duty and has had dealings with tourists from every state in the Union. Sometimes the transgressor attempts to argue the question with him, but when he discovers he is in custody of one who can neither hear nor speak he stops talking and goes to the judge to tell it.

COWBOY IS NOW
TURNING FARMER

Rider Loses Battle Against Economic Change.

Washington.—The cowboy of the northern ranges is passing, believes Mary Roberts Rhinehart, the novelist. In her latest book, "Lost Ecstasy," she pictures the cowboy waging a losing battle against restricted range, herds of sheep and the force of economic change.

"The eastern demand for young beef and the increasing tendency of farmers in the Middle West to sell their grain on the hoof, has increased the cowboy's problem," says Mrs. Rhinehart, who has spent parts of many years in the cattle country, winter and summer. She confesses the bitterness of one to whom "the passing of the cowboy is a personal tragedy."

"For the last six years it was thought in Wyoming and Montana that the slump in prices for range stock was temporary," she continues. "But now they are realizing that the cattle industry of the old days will never return. To own cattle is, in bad years, to be poor in proportion to the number you own. And so out goes the cowhand. What is he to do? Become a farmhand?"

He was an aristocrat, a free lance whose equipment was his nerve and his skill. Now he becomes a tiller of the fields, with equipment manufactured in Chicago.

"It is not that I regard the change as a retrogression," she said. "But for the individual it is something of the sort. His skilled profession is taken away. But the blow to pride in his greatest blow."

"From being an artist in his line he must become a mere unit of man power. I have seen them, my own friends, go to driving a team in the fields or a truck between the little towns. Sometimes they take to clerk-ing in stores."

"But when spring comes they are apt to gather up their saddles and spurs and move on. There may be little work for them left, but a rumor of it is sufficient to call them. And some of them regard it as more suitable to be a cowpuncher out of work than a farmhand making money."

Big Lava Cave of Idaho
Is Now Being Explored

Idaho Falls, Idaho.—Exploration of what is believed to be the largest lava cave in the United States has begun at Twin Buttes, west of Idaho Falls. Boy scouts of Teton Peak's council, the Idaho Falls Chamber of Commerce and others are making the exploration.

Tortuous twists and phenomenal phantasies of nature's handiwork are embellished in the tunnel.

If the cave is as large as the prospective explorers believe, southeastern Idaho will add another mark on its already well spotted map of scenic attractions and natural wonders. It is pointed out that the cave is larger than Kentucky's Mammoth cave and contains more formations than Oregon's caves along the Columbia river.

Town Limits Oil Wells
to Save Its Buildings

Oxford, Kan.—Because it appeared probable this town might have to move to make way for oil rigs, the city council has passed an ordinance limiting drilling to one well in each city block. All property owners in the block shall receive a prorated royalty in the event of production, according to their holdings in square feet.

Soon after oil was found here a feverish boom developed in town-let oil leases and virtually every square inch of the city, except the streets and public property, was placed under lease. The opera house was torn down and an oil well started in the former basement.

When plans developed to tear down other buildings and to sink numerous wells in front yards the city stepped in and called a halt.

Australian Bushmen
Fast Vanishing Race

Washington.—The Australian bushmen apparently are preparing to join the dodo, the passenger pigeon and the mammoth in the limbo of extinction.

This aborigine has been notable chiefly by reason of the scientific conclusion that he personifies very closely the lowest standard of human culture. By comparison, the early American Indian was a model of civilization.

The decline of the bushman is noted in a report to the Commerce department from Sydney. A census just completed concludes that the death rate among them is five of each 100 annually. The latest census placed their number at 52,298.

Jay Barnes has been promoting boxing matches in Allentown, Pa. One day he went into a restaurant and ordered the native dish of spareribs and sauerkraut, but there had been a heavy run on the dish, so the waitress shrugged her shoulders and said, "All."

"All what?"
"All over," said the Dutch waitress.
"All over what?" Jay wanted to know.

"All over with," was the final shot.

JUST A SUGGESTION

The woman, after many years' devotion to old-fashioned overshoes, had finally succumbed to modish, if by no means esthetic goloshes.

As the salesman tried on a pair of the newest zippers, the woman noted with distaste the great bulge at the top of them.

"Haven't you a pair that fit me more snugly?" she asked.

"No, madam. I'm sorry. They all come one width at the top."

"Well, isn't there anything that you could suggest to improve their fit?"

"Only that you eat more potatoes, madam," he said, with a cordial smile.

METHOD IN HIGH PRICES

Patient--"I think you are charging me too much, doctor." Doctor--"But you wouldn't want to have it said that you had anything less than a major operation."

I Guess You're Right

It is better to give than receive. Of a whipping this doubtless is true, But of kissing I cannot believe It holds good till I've tried it, can you?

Woman's Intuition

A South street man, arriving home late met his wife with this:

"Can you guess where I've been, dear?"

"I can, dearest," replied the patient woman, with a touch of vinegar in her voice, "but go ahead and tell your story."

Not Prophecy

"Do you claim to be a political prophet?"

"No," answered Senator Sorghum.

Mrs. Oke--You are?

Mrs. Owens--Yes; I need some new clothes and when I ask the dress-maker and the milliner they have the nerve to refuse.

WISE SUGGESTION

"Let's spare each other pain the next time, dad."

Not Also a Collector

"Can I write my name under the 'Received payment' on this bill?" asked the collector who likes to put things as delicately as possible.

"No, thanks," replied Brokeleigh. "I'm no autograph fiend."

Speaking the Truth

"A man in your position should always speak the truth."

"But how can I arrange," inquired Senator Sorghum, "for enough investigations to find it all out?"--Washington Star.

Why Agnes Changed Her Mind

By CORONA REMINGTON

(Copyright.)

AGNES DILLINGHAM buried her curly brown head in her pillow and wept with long convulsive sobs that seemed to rack her slender body. Then followed a stillness of exhaustion, then more tears brought on by living over again the whole terrible thing in her mind.

Mrs. Dillingham, hunting her daughter all through the house, at last found her curled up in the middle of the bed that always looked so much bigger when Agnes was in it.

"Why, daughter, what is the matter?" she asked in quick alarm, putting a loving hand on the girl's heaving shoulder. "You look like a happy fiancée, I must say."

"N-nothing, only John's so poor."

"So poor!" echoed Mrs. Dillingham.

"Yes. Poor! He never can buy the best seats at opera or the theater and Lucille and her fiancée always take a box and you know all of our friends have more money than John. It's so--so humiliating."

"Nonsense, Agnes. You're unreasonable. Just because Lucille's engaged to a wealthier man doesn't mean she'll be any happier than you. John's a splendid young man and he has brains, and father says he's going right up in the business world. I believe you love money more than you do, John."

"Oh, mother, how can you be so cruel! You know how I love him, but it's just so--so embarrassing. It's going to be awful after we marry. I don't know how I'll ever stand it. We'll be skimping and scratching along forever."

Quick steps on the stairs interrupted the conversation and a second later Lucille Sturtevant burst into the room with the unceremonious familiarity of an intimate friend.

"Well, what's the matter with you?" exclaimed Mrs. Dillingham.

Lucille threw her furs on a chair and flung herself into another one.

"I'm so peeved at Tom I could die!" she said angrily. "We've had a terrible fuss. I've pleaded and begged and cried and he won't budge. I doubt if we ever marry now. He's too--too selfish or something."

"Well, what has Tom done?" asked Agnes, forgetting her own troubles for a moment and sitting up in bed.

"Done! It's what he hasn't done. He has no more consideration for my feelings than if I were a stone in the road."

"Well, tell us," said Agnes irritably.

"Don't go on raving like that. My goodness, my head's splitting now."

"I want to build in Lynnhurst. That's where all the young married couples in our set are going now, and Tom says he can't afford it. It would mean five or six servants and a fifty or sixty thousand dollar house and everything to match. And he says he'd rather build in Morning View and have the best home there than to have the cheapest home in Lynnhurst. Isn't that silly? Isn't he too unreasonable for words! I get so mad at him I could shake him. And I told him if he talked hard enough and long enough his father'd build him a house in Lynnhurst at a few thousand more just as easily as one in Morning View. But he won't do it--says he has some pride and all that rubbish. He forgets I have some pride, too."

Lucille dabbed angrily at the tears that were rolling down her cheeks.

Mrs. Dillingham looked at the two girls and then she spoke.

"If I were your fiancée I'd consider you both a mighty poor risk and I wouldn't marry either of you. You'd make nice helpmates for a man if he ever needed help. Frankly, I'm sorry for both John and Tom. Why, do you know, when father and I were engaged we used to ride the street car to the park on Sundays and spend the afternoon there, and if he was feeling very flush we'd go on the merry-go-round."

Agnes laughed shrilly. "Oh, what a joke! Imagine!" she said breathlessly.

Lucille out of deference to her hostess checked her mirth somewhat but it was the same quality of derisive laughter.

That evening when Agnes' fiancée called there was something peculiar about his manner. He was as tender and affectionate as ever but somehow solemn, almost depressed.

"I've been thinking over what you said this afternoon when we were at lunch together," he began at last in a voice that was not his own, "and I've decided I have no right to marry you. I could never make you happy. You deserve some one with the greater earning capacity." The words tumbled out in a volley as if he had rehearsed his speech.

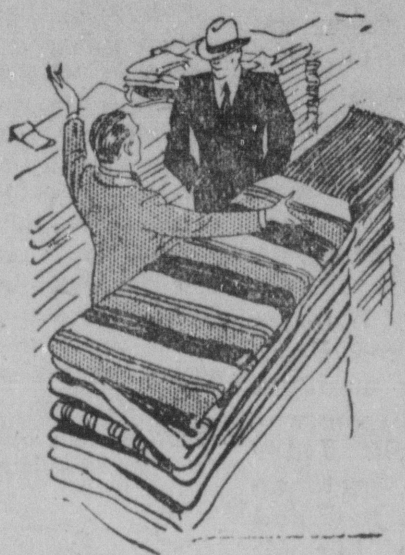

Agnes looked at him, wretched and forlorn, sitting beside her, and a quick pang of contrition swept over her.

"John," she said, her hand creeping into his. "I've been a perfect little beast. I didn't realize it before, but I know it now. It's you I want, not your old money or a grand home, and I don't care if we never go to another theater party or anything. If we can't afford anything else we can always go to the p-park and ride on the merry-go-round."

"You dear, dear ridiculous child," he laughed, sweeping her into his arms--and for the first time since their engagement Agnes was genuinely happy.

DEATH QUICKLY CLAIMS THREE VICTIMS

IN AWFUL AUTO ACCIDENT AT LEISTVILLE SATURDAY

Two Women and One Man Die From Result of Auto Collision At Intersection of Adelphi, Maysville and Zanesville Pikes, Seven Miles East of This City, Saturday Evening At 6:30 O'clock—Accident Due To Speeding Car.

In a collision of two automobiles Saturday evening at six-thirty o'clock at Leistville, one woman, Mrs. Bryan Riffle, was killed instantly and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Eliza Paxton Riffle, who was in the same car, was so badly injured internally that she died Sunday morning at six o'clock and Edward Laughlin, of Newark, was so badly hurt that he died Sunday night at midnight.

The accident, which was one of the worst in the history of the county, occurred at the intersection of the Adelphi and the Zanesville and Maysville turnpikes.

In the Riffle machine were Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Riffle and their baby, Thomas Edward, a child eight months old, their niece, Eleanor Timmons, daughter of Mrs. Lloyd Martin, and Mrs. Eliza Paxton Riffle, mother of Bryan Riffle. The last named was driving and the family was coming to this city to do their shopping.

Mr. Riffle was driving a Studebaker touring car and as he neared the cross roads, he saw bearing down on him an Essex coach coming from the east at a high rate of speed, and before he could stop, the coach rammed into his machine just as both reached the center of the intersecting highways.

The impact was so great that both automobiles were reduced to a mass of junk, and the steel parts were twisted out of all semblance of their former shape.

In the Essex were five men; Edward Laughlin, Louis Swinehart, Herbert Stark, Clarence Schmidt and Robert McBryan, all of Newark, who were on their way to Chillicothe to attend a Moose convention.

Mr. Swinehart and Mr. Laughlin were knocked unconscious, both suffered concussions and their skulls were fractured. The two injured men were brought to this city and were taken to the office of Dr. D. V. Courtright and later to the Home and hospital, where they received surgical treatment by Dr. Courtright, who was assisted by District Nurse Miss Charlotte Phelps and Nurse Miss Marvene Ryan, of this city.

Herbert Stark, a member of the Newark party, sustained a fracture of his left arm. The other two escaped with only slight injuries, and the three returned to their homes on Saturday evening.

Mr. Swinehart, who is a retired policeman, will probably recover. Mr. Laughlin was a widower, about sixty years of age and the father of two daughters. His brother and sister of two sons and two daughters. His brother and wife and one son and one daughter were with him Sunday and the last named were at his bedside when the end came.

The body was taken to his home in Newark Monday morning.

This is the third fatality in the Riffle family. Martin Riffle, a stepson of Mrs. Eliza Paxton Riffle, who died Sunday morning, was killed at the Mound street crossing of the Pennsylvania railroad some years ago.

Mrs. Eliza Paxton Riffle. Mrs. Eliza Paxton Riffle was the widow of Sylvester Riffle, and was born in Hocking county, November 14, 1861. She was a daughter of William and Mary Reed Paxton. She came to this county forty-five years ago.

One son and six daughters survive. They are Bryan Riffle, Mrs. Millard Patrick, Miss Bessie Riffle, Mrs. Josie Kinser, Mrs. Rose Ehnie, of London, Mrs. Myrtle Kinser, of Duvall, and Mrs. Martha Martin, of near this city.

Of her immediately family, four brothers and three sisters survive. They are Noah, Robert and William Paxton, of this city; Joseph Paxton, of Hocking county; Mrs. Edward Valentine, of this city; Mrs. Minnie Seesholtz, of Bremen, and Mrs. Nancy Hunter, of Hocking county.

The funeral services will be held from the Morris United Brethren church, Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Lewis Hampshire, of Westerville. Interment in the Hitler-Ludwig cemetery. Mrs. Bryan Riffle.

Mrs. Bryan Riffle was born in Columbus in 1891. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Waits, of Kingston. Her mother, who also survives, is now married to Isaac Rossiter, Whisler.

She was married to Bryan Riffle, September 12, 1925. Besides her husband, she leaves a baby son, Thomas Edward, eight months old.

The funeral services will be held from the Whisler church Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock. Burial in the cemetery at Whisler. The body was taken to the home of her mother, Mrs. Isaac Rossiter, Sunday morning. Edward Laughlin

The third victim of the accident was born at Jewett, this state, April 2, 1867. His wife, who was Miss Jennie Simmons, died in 1908.

He was employed at the Woerhle stove foundry at Newark.

He is survived by two sons, Thomas Laughlin, of Detroit, Michigan and W. L. Laughlin of Jewett; and three daughters; Mrs. Harold Alloway, of Newark; Mrs. Clyde Cole, of Kalamazoo, Michigan and Miss Laura Laughlin, of Detroit, Michigan.

His son, Thomas Laughlin and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Alloway were present when Mr. Laughlin passed away. The remains will be taken to Jewett for burial.

Of his immediately family two brothers and one sister survive. They are R. A. Laughlin, of Knoxville, Pennsylvania; Clyde Laughlin, of Youngstown and Mrs. O. S. McCurdy of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Laughlin was a member of the Royal Order of the Moose and also a member of the Moose Legion.

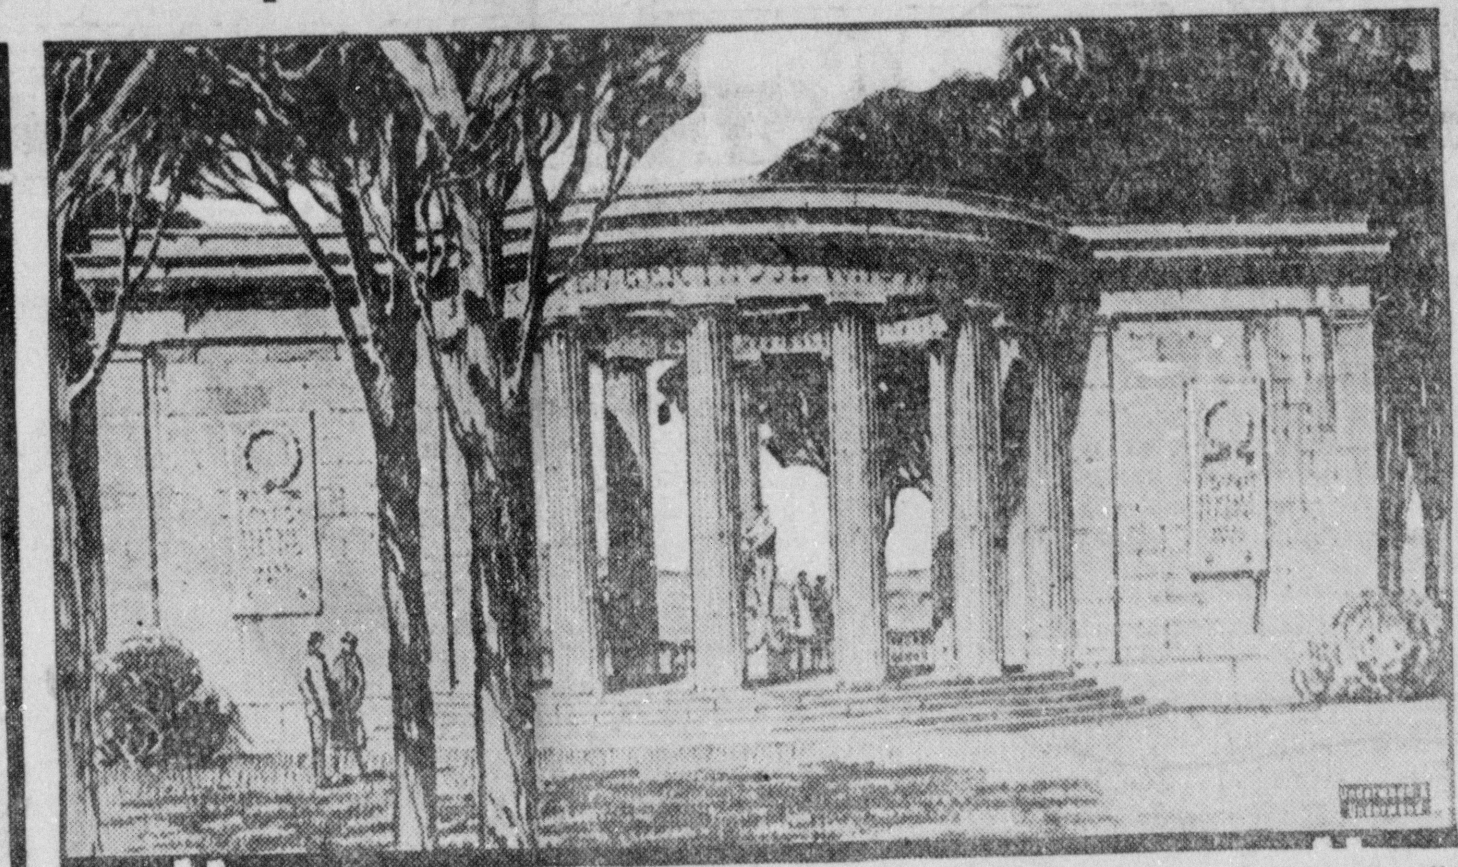

COL. W. E. LADUE

Col. William E. Ladue, recently appointed engineer commissioner for the District of Columbia, who succeeded Col. J. Franklin Bell. He was born at Adrian, Mich., and educated at the University of Minnesota and West Point Military academy.

Mrs. James Stout and Mrs. Clarence Wolf were visitors in Columbus today.

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Delaware — With scarcely any tangible clues, Sheriff Connor Lambert, said today he would attempt to check the movements of A. J. Purgett, 33, Lorain roader, prior to his apparent murder some time Saturday or early Sunday. Purgett's body was found in a ditch on a side road one mile west of Sunbury, by passing motorists yesterday.

Cleveland — Of this I am convinced that the young girl of today, in spite of her disposition toward dissipation is far healthier and physically fit than the sedate girl of the past.

Lorain — In one of Lorain's most spectacular fires, the Cities Service Oil Co., burned to the ground late last night, with an estimated damage of $50,000. Shooting flames and smoke high into the air the fire raged for two hours, until the four companies which had responded to the alarm had it in check.

Cleveland — Funeral services will be held Tuesday for Hugh Huntington Howard, Cleveland artist, who died here Sunday in his home. Death followed a paralytic stroke suffered a week ago. As a painter of landscape and marine scenes Howard gained a national reputation.

Tiffin — Charged with obtaining money by false pretenses, T. M. Gregory Jr., of Akron, is free under $300 awaiting grand jury action here. Gregory was arrested upon complaint of Mrs. Mary Nick who charges he obtained $1200 from her several years ago by fraudulent misrepresentation of the value of stock in a rubber company. He appeared in justice court.

Van Wert — Hearing to have been held Saturday for Thomas Wade, 21, Harrison township, held in jail one charge of attempting to poison his foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dorce Morehead, was delayed until Monday. Hearing is to be held before Justice A. C. Gilpin, in the complaint fully made the grade will, within a charged Wade put poison in milk.

"Piccadilly"

There is some difference of opinion concerning the derivation of the name "piccadilly." It is believed to be from "piccadills," the small stiff collars affected by men of fashion of the time of James I. The street was named for the house of entertainment known as "Piccadilly house."

NINE INJURED AUTOMOBILES IN COLLISION

Accident Occurred on the National Road When Three Machines Came Together.

Nine persons were injured, five seriously, in a triple automobile collision on the National pike near South Vienna, 11 miles east of Springfield.

Melvin Tingley, 8, sustained a fractured skull and his condition is regarded as serious. Mrs. Barbara Collins, 46, 312 Donaldson street, Columbus, was badly cut about the head and face and her right eye was destroyed. Mrs. Elizabeth Paul, 60 Akron, sustained a dislocated shoulder and arm and Harry Baughman, 35, Barberton, received severe cuts and probable rupture of the spine.

Mrs. Minnie Dillon, 53, Plumwood, was cut about the head and is reported injured internally. Those who received slight injuries are Steve Botkinns, London; Mrs. Edna Baughman, Barberton; Ruth Collins, Columbus, and Isaac Dinmon, London.

The accident occurred when the car driven by Isaac Dillon collided head-on with one driven by Harry Baughman. James Collins, driving behind the Baughman machine, crashed into the wreckage.

STUDENT WAS KILLED NEAR KIRKERSVILLE

Robert Broadfoot, 26, 770 Bellows avenue, Columbus, died Sunday morning in Grant hospital from a fractured skull and internal injuries suffered in an automobile accident Saturday night on the National highway near Kirkersville.

Broadfoot's automobile collided head-on with the auto driven by Hubbard Lindenberg, 1122 Cambridge place, who suffered a broken hand, according to the police.

He was a senior in the college of engineering at Ohio State university and was a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity.

DEMENTED MAN.

Andrew Slash, colored, evidently a demented man, was picked up on the Island road by Deputy Sheriff John Ward Jr., Saturday evening and was placed in the county jail.

NEW LAWYER.

Emmitt Littleton Crist, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Crist, Saturday evening received a telegram from Judge Frank Gusweiler, of Cincinnati, informing him that he had passed with high honors the examination for admission to the bar.

Mr. Crist, together with the other disciples of Blackstone who successfully made the grade fill, within a short time be sworn in by Chief Justice Carrington T. Marshall of the Ohio supreme court.

He will probably open an office in this city for the practice of law.

WILL RULE RUMANIA

Here is the latest photograph of Little Crown Prince Michael, son of Prince Carol of Rumania and grandson of King Ferdinand and Queen Marie. Some day he will be the king of Rumania.

MAYOR'S COURT

Lee Reynolds, wanted for forging a check of $8 drawn on Chris Meinfelter's credit, and cashed at the Betz restaurant was arrested Sunday and put in the calaboose.

Arthur Routt, a drunk, arrested Saturday evening was given a fine of $10 and costs, which he paid and was released.

ASK BIG JUDGMENT.

The Ohio National Life Insurance company, of Columbus, has brought suit against Forest Short to foreclose a mortgage on 1,432 acres of land in Ross county, amount claimed is $41,400.

DOCTOR LEIST GIVES UP LIFE TO RESCUE SON

Former Kingston Physician Goes to a Watery Grave Sunday.

Dr. Joseph W. Leist, formerly of Kingston, son of Amos Leist, lost his life in the Olentangy river at Columbus Sunday in an endeavor to save his son from drowning.

While Dr. Leist was battling to save the boy, two other sons, George 6, and Joseph 11, stood horrified and helpless on the bank, watching a picnic breakfast turning into a tragedy.

John, too, probably would have been a victim, had not Don Miller, 19 of Chicago, who is visiting his uncle T. J. O'Neil, 88 East Oakland avenue, arrived just after Dr. Leist slipped from a ledge into deep water and left John floundering. Miller completed the rescue of John, who was little the worse for his experience.

Dr. Leist had been in the water 10 or 15 minutes and after gaining a footing on the ledge had stood there with the water around his shoulder holding John in safety. When he slipped off into the deeper water he was too exhausted to make further fight for life. The body remained in the water about 45 minutes before being recovered.

With his three boys, Dr. Leist went to the riverside for an early outdoor breakfast, expecting to return home about 10 o'clock. While he was preparing breakfast at 7 a. m. the boys wandered down to the river's brink. A moment later he was attracted by the screams of the two brothers that John was in the water.

Without hesitation the father plunged in to rescue his son. Because of the early morning hour the neighborhood was deserted.

Dr. Leist was born at Kingston and was a graduate of Bellevue hospital, New York. He was assistant professor in the medical college at Ohio State university. His widow, Mrs. Laura Leist, his father, Amos Leist, Kingston; a half brother, Robert Leist, Cleveland and a half sister, Mrs. James Wright, also survive.

H. EBELING PASSED AWAY IN COLUMBUS

Herman Ebeling, 77, 726 Franklin avenue and well known here, one of Ohio's veteran musicians, died at 5:45 p. m. Sunday in Dr. Harding's sanitarium, Worthington, from heart trouble, following a second attack of bronchitis. He was ill for a week.

Mr. Ebeling taught in Columbus for more than 40 years and some of the best known pianists were his pupils.

His widow, Mrs. Marie Ebeling; two daughters, Mrs. Albert Cook, 125 Parkwood avenue; and Miss Ruth Ebeling, and a grandson, survive.

Relieving Body's Tension

French gymnastics are to make the body flexible and to free it from habits of muscular tension, and relaxing exercises are used. These consist in making absolutely limp one part of the body after another, and finally the whole at once by removing all tension from the articulation. These exercises are followed by a series of energizing or vitalizing movements, slow and rhythmic.

OHIO PAROLE VIOLATOR HARD HIT BY RULING

Turner Says Returned Prisoners
Must Serve Maximum
Sentences.

Parole violators and habitual criminals are hard hit in a decision handed down to the Ohio board of clemency by Attorney General Edward C. Turner which declares that a parole violator returned to the Ohio penitentiary must serve his maximum sentence and will not be eligible for parole, and that no prisoner can be released from serving one sentence to start serving on another.

For example, a prisoner serving a one to 30 year sentence and paroled after serving one year, must, if he violates his parole, serve the remainder of the sentence and cannot be paroled. The time he served before being paroled and the time out on parole count on the sentence, but he must serve the 30 years, according to the ruling.

If he commits a felony while on parole he must serve out his first sentence, no difference how long it is, before he starts on the second sentence.

Paroles are from one to three years, after which the prisoner if he has conducted himself properly is given his release by the board, as provided by law.

There are now 491 prisoners on parole. In the penitentiary now there are 73 prisoners whose paroles were revoked and who have been returned to prison, and caught under the ruling they must serve their maximum sentences. Revocation of paroles range anywhere from a month to two years, at the end of which time the board would hear the prisoner again to decide whether he should be re-paroled.

"It is my opinion that Section 2175 in no wise grants authority to the board of clemency to release a prisoner who has been paroled and has been convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary for a new crime from serving any part of his first sentence in order to begin serving the second sentence before the maximum term of the first sentence has been served," Mr. Turner's opinion said.

In relation to habitual criminals, this ruling is regarded by officials here as deep biting as the Baumes law of New York, which automatically sentences a fourth offender for life.

The Main One

"Yes," said the lawyer, "you go through bankruptcy and it will relieve you of all your financial burdens."

"That so?" said the man who was in trouble. "And what becomes of her?"

"Her? What do you mean?"

"My wife, of course."—Boston Transcript.

GREEN REBUKES

Doctrine Ruled Out.

Washington, July 22.—An attack upon the Monroe Doctrine by Venezuelan delegate Rafaelo Martinez before the Pan-American Federation of Labor conference today was peremptorily stopped by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, presiding officer, who ruled Martinez out of order and rebuked him.

Martinez denounced "American intervention in Nicaragua," saying that if the Pan-American labor body did not take a stand against the Monroe Doctrine, those participating in the deliberations here would have nothing to show to the Latin-American countries.

Their Private Fish Pond

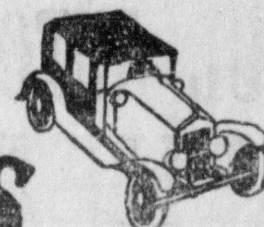

About every third fish in the North sea ends by being eaten either in England or in Holland. If you drop a ring, either in Boston or in London, your chance of seeing it again is very small. But if you will send it to the English fishery board, they will tie it to the tail of a fish and let it loose in the North sea; and every third time you will get your ring back.—Alfred North Whitehead in the Atlantic Monthly.

15,000 Cypriotes Roam About Without Country
Cairo.—The unhappy plight of the "man without a country" seems to be multiplied many times in the case of Cypriotes, as the natives of Cyprus are called in Egypt, and that entirely without any fault of their own. It will be recalled that Cyprus formally was annexed by Great Britain at the outbreak of the war with Turkey in November, 1914, and in that act all the inhabitants of the island were made British subjects. There were and are today in Egypt, however, about 15,000 Cypriotes, for whom no provision was made in the act of annexation.

For a dozen years they have occupied an equivocal position, not having renounced their allegiance to Cyprus, and yet not being recognized as subjects of the new sovereign of that island. Now the Egyptian government puts them in an awkward quandary by demanding peremptorily that they either become Egyptian subjects or citizens or else quit the country as undesirable aliens.

The Cypriotes have sent a delegation to London to appeal to the British government for its protection, assuming that if it extends its citizenship to them, as it did to the actual residents of Cyprus, they will be enabled thus to remain in Egypt, where their interests chiefly lie, or else to return to Cyprus as citizens of that island.

Why worry about your laundry. Send it to us and we give you good service at reasonable cost.

C. & H. WORKMAN
Instantly Killed By Bolt of Lightning In Ross County.

Lightning struck and instantly killed Albert Beechler, 53, 677 North High street, while Beechler was at work as a laborer on the Chesapeake & Hocking construction in Green township, 8 or 9 miles above Chillicothe, Thursday afternoon at three o'clock.

When the heavy hail and rain storm came up, Beechler, along with fellow workmen, rushed to shelter. In his hurry, Beechler forgot his coat. Once in the shelter, Beechler was reminded of his coat and started across an open space to get it.

As he hurried across the field, the bolt of lightning struck him. His companions, blinded partially by the flash, did not see him fall. They realized that the lightning had either struck Beechler or so close to him that he was stunned. They went out to the body and found that Beechler was dead.

The lightning bolt struck Beechler directly on top of the head. His cap was torn in two from the center through the heavy band in the rear. Beechler was wearing a blue denim work jacket and it and his shirt were ripped to shreds by the force of the bolt. Although Beechler's clothing or cap were unburned, the hair on top of his head was slightly singed.

The lightning bolt did not stop Beechler's watch, the time-piece evidently not being affected by the electric charge.

Beechler was born in Ross county on April 29, 1874, the son of Adam and Margaret Beechler. He was a member of the Four-Square Gospel church.

His wife, Bertha, three sons, Donald, Howard and Delbert, and two daughters, Mrs. Earl Kedash, city, and Mrs. Cecil Storts, city; two brothers, Watt Beechler and Zina Beechler, both of Upper Twin township, and two sisters, Mrs. Ossie Clouser, city and Miss Lillie Beechler, Columbus, survive him.

Funeral services will be held Saturday, 10 a. m. from the residence, Rev. Thelma Routt officiating. Interment will be made in South Salem cemetery.—Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

THE 1926 TAX VALUATION OF OHIO

Under an act passed in 1925, all counties in Ohio were required to re-appraise their real estate for taxation, unless complete re-appraisements had been made within the previous three years. In accordance with this act, 75 of the 88 counties of the state have been re-appraised within the last two years. In many counties this was the first complete re-valuation of real property since 1910, though partial re-appraisements had been made at various times.

Hereafter each county must be re-appraised at least once in every six years. The appraisalment of property is handled by the county auditor subject to supervision and review by the state tax commission.

As a result of re-appraisalment and the natural growth of values, the tax list of the state rose from $12,680,000,000 in 1925 to $13,350,000,000 in 1926, an increase of 5.3 per cent.

Not only is real estate responsible for most of the growth in tax values, but urban real estate in particular represents by far the major part of the increase in the last year. Out of a total rise of $637,000,000 in real estate appraisements in 1926, the increase in real estate valuations in cities and villages amounted to $498,000,000, as compared with $139,000,000 outside of municipalities. In the 65 counties which completed their re-appraisements in 1926, the valuation of real estate outside of municipalities rose 9.1 per cent and within municipalities 19.6 per cent.

In Pickaway County real estate appraisements were increased from $37,000,000 to $40,000,000 by the 1926 appraisalment.

Newspaper's Short Life
"Public Occurrences" was the name of what is said to have been America's first newspaper. One edition was issued in Boston, September 25, 1760, by Benjamin Harris and Richard Pierce. Four days later the Colonial censors, already on the job, suppressed it and another edition was never published.

Have Different Meanings
The words "practicable" and "practical" are sometimes confused in usage. "Practicable" is that which is capable of being accomplished, while "practical" refers to that which actually be turned to account. For instance, aerial navigation is "practicable" on a small scale; it is not yet a "practical" means of ordinary communication.

Entering Poorhouse, Meets Deserted Wife

Lancaster, Ohio. — Charles Trotter, seventy-six, traveled "over the hill to the poorhouse" here and at the door of the institution met his wife, Bertha, seventy-three, whom he deserted 56 years ago.

The woman, who says he deserted her as a child-wife, has been an inmate of the institution since 1871, when she became ill from worry over her abandonment and the death of her infant child.

During the 56 years Trotter wandered the face of the earth.
While seeking his fortune in the West he was falsely informed of her death and never returned until, broken in old age and destitute, the poorhouse became the trail's end for him.

His bride of more than half a century ago recognized him.
When asked by the matron if she still cared for him she replied: "No, he left me when I needed him the most—he need not have returned."

KANSAS WOMAN PREFERS
"SODDY" TO MODERN HOME

Says It Has Many Pleasant Memories for Her and Refuses to Give It Up.

Quinter, Kan.—In the center of this town of 1,000 population and one block from the post office is one of the original "soddies" of Gove county.

The owner, Mrs. Mary Springer, seventy-nine, refuses to abandon it for the reason, she says, it is warmer in winter and cooler in summer than its modern frame, brick and stucco neighbors. However, Mrs. Springer compromised with present-day modernization of the home and her pioneer abode has comforts and conveniences little dreamed of by her and her husband when they built the sod house, said to be the first dwelling in Gove county 30 years ago.

There are electric lights and a piano. The walls and ceiling are papered and carpets cover the floors of the four rooms. Vines and shrubs almost conceal the earthen wall material of the front of the house, while within doors the furnishings are very much the same as in any other residence of persons in well-to-do circumstances.

Mrs. Springer has four married children, two sons and two daughters, all of whom have pleaded with their mother to live with them. But Mrs.
Springer won't listen to their entrearies.

"My husband and I lived more than a score of years in this house and old associations and memories count for a great deal," Mrs. Springer explained to a visitor. "I am happy here, so why leave? Besides, I have my garden and chickens to keep me busy."

"You see, a lot of persons here depend on me for their chickens and eggs. Then my life-long friend, Mrs.
Sophia Baird, who is alone in the world, too, lives with me. We are contented and have plenty to do."

Mrs. Springer and her husband, the late Henry Springer, came to Kansas from Warren county, Mo. Mr. Springer died seven years ago. The husband of Mrs. Sophia Baird, who makes her home with Mrs. Springer, has been dead eight years. The two women prepare their own meals, do their own housework and work a garden.
Mrs. Baird is one of the first settlers of Gove county, moving there in 1832.

Locates His Sister
by Calendar Picture

Dallas, Texas.—While collecting bills in the office of an insurance agent here Isaac Baskowitz's eyes were attracted to an art calendar on the wall.

The calendar bore the likeness of a pretty girl. Baskowitz was amazed at the resemblance to a younger sister from whom he was separated in Russia ten years ago.

He studied the picture and decided to investigate. The calendar bore the name of the lithographer. Baskowitz communicated with him and learned that the subject was none other than his sister, Gertrude, who is now eighteen years old. Baskowitz is en route to New York to greet the girl.

Shades of Jesse James!Cow Rustlers Use Autos

Martinez, Calif.—Cattle rustlers in the Contra Costa hills have adopted modern improvements. They now carry on their felonious activities in slippers, instead of on horseback, as in the olden days. If Mrs. William Ward of Danville is correct in her suspicions.

Reporting the theft of two blooded bulls worth $800 each from her Black Hawk farm, Mrs. Ward told the sheriff she believed the animals were purchased by a man she saw drive up to the ranch in a small automobile.

There have been a number of cases of cattle rustling in Contra Costa county reported recently.

GIVE PRIZE FOR NAMING PARLOR CAR

The Scioto Valley Will Give Twenty-Five Dollars in Gold
For the Best Suggestion.

The Scioto Valley Railway and Power company will, on August first, add another car to the limited parlor car service on this division.

The new car will be number 110.
This with number 115, now in service will increase the northbound parlor car to six parlor car trips and the southbound to five daily.

This additional car is luxuriously finished, the woodwork is in cherry and is furnished with green leather chairs and green rugs. The observation end is of plate glass and is equipped with awning. The exterior finish of the car is orange.

The company has asked the people of Circleville and Pickaway county to suggest an appropriate name and slogan for this new car and has offered a prize of $25 in gold to the one whose suggestion is selected.

The first limited parlor car has proven its worth and it is believed that this additional service will meet the approval and requirements of the traveling public, as there have been many requests for this increased equipment.

This will necessitate a complete change in the schedules of the Traction company, for the reason that the parlor car limiteds will take the place of the locals at the same hour out of the terminals.

The Scioto Valley Railway and Power company, has always striven to furnish pleasant, adequate service and deserves the support of the city and county. The company gives employment to many of our people and is a substantial contributor to county and city funds as a payer of taxes. Competition in the carrying of passengers and freight is fierce, and this effort on the part of the Traction company to furnish comfortable, safe, certain and speedy service should be appreciated by all our people and should be encouraged in every possible way.

We understand, thru J. O. Bradfield, general passenger and freight agent, that the company will stage a contest to determine the most appropriate name for the new limited parlor car which will be put in service August 1.

This contest will be open to every man, woman or child in Pickaway county with the exception that no employe of the company nor any members of their families will be allowed to compete.

To the person suggesting the most appropriate name for the new car, and accompanying it with the most appropriate slogan of not more than five words, a cash prize of $25 in gold will be given.

The winner will be chosen by a committee of the Circleville Chamber of Commerce named by the president and all coupons should be mailed to Karl Herrmann, secretary.

Beginning Tuesday a coupon will be printed in the Union-Herald for five days and the contest will close August 10.

Clip the coupon. Mail your suggestion to the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. You may win the prize. Watch the Union-Herald Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday for the coupons.

RISK DEATH TO DELIVER MAIL

U. S. Air Pilots Constantly
Beset by Dangers,
Archives Reveal.

Washington.—Everyone entering or leaving Washington cannot help being struck by these words carved high on the pediment of the United States Post Office building:

"Neither snow, nor rain, nor heat, nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds."

These lines, written by Herodotus, probably describe better than any contemporary the glory which every American attaches to the air mail service since Col. Charles A. Lindbergh made his flight. Yet they were not written with any New York-to-Paris flight in mind, but as a compliment to the couriers of Cyrus the Great hundreds of years before the birth of Christ, writes H. Cabot Lodge, Jr., in the New York Herald-Tribune.

Colonel Lindbergh has shown us that they are not an overstatement, but how many of us realize that hidden in the yellowing archives of the Post Office department are reports of air mail flyers who by their thoughtless bravery justified that tribute before Colonel Lindbergh became the cynosure of all eyes?

The reports of air mail pilots in the Post Office department reflect that very humor, heroism and modesty which every one now exalts in Colonel Lindbergh. The corps to which he belongs is a magnificent background for him, and more should be known about these men who risk their lives throughout the twenty-four hours so that a business letter may reach San Francisco on time.

It is hard to make a selection from the wealth of material in the archives of the Post Office department. One first of all is struck by the many humorous incidents connected with the air mail service, which are all too often coupled with desperate flights against the elements in a Rocky mountain gorge.

Wants Ride if Plane Is Safe.

Here is a worthy on a Utah ranch who makes this unique contribution to the division superintendent:

"Your flying machines pass over my ranch nearly every day and I am quite interested in them. If they are absolutely safe I would like to take a ride some day when I come up to Salt Lake. I noticed one passing the other day which didn't have any propeller on. It seemed to be in a terrible hurry to get to Salt Lake to get another propeller."

Then there are stories of planes which land on rabbits and of eagles which land on planes and are pursued by their mates. One eagle got caught in a strut of the plane's wheel and when removed the pilot was instructed to find that it had a wing spread of eight feet and weighed eight pounds.

A novel version of Charles A. Dana's definition of news is recorded when a dog tried to bite an airplane at the Cincinnati (Ohio) field. The propeller cut the dog's head off and flung it in the face of a nearby pilot with such force as to cut a large gash in his face.

But these humorous anecdotes are only the flavoring for the real bulk of the story of everyday heroism which these records contain. There is "Red" Andert, for instance, one of Lind-bergh's brothers in arms on the route from Salt Lake City to Pasco, Wash.

One night last December "Red"—his real name is Paul—had some rough riding, which is told in the following report by his division superintendent:

"Andert hit the mountain ranges covered solid with heavy fog. He stuck his nose into it, but couldn't see the end of his wing, so changed his mind then and there. No breaks in the fog for over thirty miles—but he wouldn't come back. Landed on a highway leading through a pass and started taxiing to the summit. His progress may not have been so 'swift,' but it was 100 per cent complete."

Roads "Bad" for Planes.

The report then explains the difficulties of driving over mountain roads in an airplane, and then states that "Red" was stopped because one of the wings of his plane hit a post.

"Then he walked several miles," the report continued, "and hired a Ford truck to tow him over the saddle. Got sufficient visibility to take off—right off the road. Another hour of flying and more fog. No road to land on this time, but there was a river deep down between steep walls on either side. He made for it, flying under the bank of fog just above the water.
Thirty miles of this. Then the fog lifted.

"Andert was now in unfamiliar territory. Over another mountain covered with fog and landed at a farmhouse to get location. The house, he found, was empty. While he had gone to the house his idling motor had stopped. The main gasoline tank was dry, but there were ten gallons of gas in the emergency tank. From the time he had been out and the way his compass had been spinning he could have been in Colorado, Wyoming, Oregon or possibly Idaho, where he was supposed to be.

"He started out again and soon hit a clear space and familiar territory.
Arrived in Boise, having been out eight hours for a trip of a little more than 300 miles."

Another pilot, C. K. Vance, by name, ran into a snow storm on the Nevada-

California state line in the middle of jagged mountain peaks.

"After trying for three hours to break through," so runs the official report, "he found himself in the center of the storm, with fuel low and darkness coming on. He landed in an open space covered with six feet of brush without injury to himself. He started out in the storm to the mining camp at Last Chance.

Spends Night in Snow.

"Making little headway, he decided he couldn't reach the camp, and, therefore, started a fire between two fallen trees and spent the night there in the snow. At daybreak he started for the mining camp and reached it about 7 o'clock. Accompanied by miners, he started back to the ship with pack mules, for the mail, which was delivered at Colfax post office at 9:30 that night. Meanwhile all planes in the vicinity were searching for him, as there are no telephone facilities at Last Chance."

A veteran of the Salt Lake City-
San Francisco loop, Pilot C. Eugene,
"Johnny" Johnson, had a harrowing experience last February, which he describes in the following terms:

"Across Sacramento valley I had a ceiling of about 2,000 feet, with light rain most of the way. Troy and Reno weather reports not unfavorable and I could see mountain tops on the hump (this means the Sierra Nevadas), just before landing at Mather field.

"Was forced onto the railroad two or three miles east of American canyon, at which point the rain had turned to snow. The dark leeward sides of the snowsheds made a good mark to follow in the snowstorm until I reached a point about Troy, where I lost sight of everything."

"Circled several times trying to get on, but gave up. Decided to return to Mather, but was only able to return a mile or two. It had closed in behind me and the going was not too good in between these points. Was gradually forced to the floor of the canyon, much below the level of the railroad, and finally was limited to a tight spiral.
In order to see the ground at all.

"By this time the lower wing was just clearing the trees and the rocks and the exceedingly rough going made things quite impossible. Saw a cleared space of perhaps a hundred yards between the trees and tried to park the wreck in this space, but due to rough air and rotten visibility I was unable to judge my turn so that I could head into it. Missed it three times.

Parked in the Trees.

"Was in practically a vertical bank all the time and finally decided that clear space or not, I had to get down.
Cut out switches and parked in the trees. Broke off a pine tree at the snow-line about 18 inches in diameter.
Apparently in the air when I struck it, for the ship piled up a washout 30 feet beyond the tree in one mass."

When a plane "piles up a washout" it means in ordinary English that it has been completely wrecked.

"I had lost my sense of direction," Johnson continues, "so with the aid of a pocket compass I headed south. The snow was 10 to 15 inches deep and I was told later that 40 inches of it had fallen in the preceding 24 hours. My snowshoes sank into it for at least a foot every step. This, added to the fact that there was a 45 to 50 degree slope covered with crevasses, made the going pretty bad. It was for this reason that it took me so long to get word to Reno.

"After four hours of climbing I picked up the railroad and started hiking west—down grade. Found a telephone in a snowshed about a mile away."

There are many more fascinating tales in the archives of the Post Office department, all showing a similar pic-turesqueness and insouciance. Some get killed and many take mortal chances, but the mail is delivered regardless of risk.

IN MEMORIAM

Editor Union-Herald: — Charles Lincoln Daily, son of Charles and Abigail Daily was born at Waverly,
Ohio, July 23, 1866, and died July 17, 1922, aged 60 years, 11 months and 24 days.

He leaves two sisters, Mrs. Jonas Warner, of Ashville, and Miss Lizzie, at home, and three brothers;
John and Ralph, of Chillicothe, and David, at home. Two brothers; Daniel W., of Kansas, and William B.,
of Springfield township, Ross county, died years ago. There are also several nieces and nephews.

Charles L. Daily resided in Pickaway county for many years and was engaged in farming which he carried on quite extensively. About twenty years ago he, with a brother and a sister, moved to Ross county, which he served as sealer of weights. Thru this office he became quite well known over the entire county.

He was public spirited, the founder of Elmdale grange and worthy master for several years. He was also a member of the Winnetka tribe of the order of Red Men, of Tucson, Ohio.

Honest, truthful, kind and generous hearted, he won the highest respect and confidence of all who knew him. The neighbors, as well as his family, will miss him sadly for in sickness and in health he was always ready and willing to render assistance.

During the last two years he had read and studied God's word. He was in possession of the "Old Family Bible" in which many rich verses and passages had been marked by his father's hand and in his last weeks of suffering when he was unable to read, he deeply enjoyed those beautiful verses as his sister read them to him over and over again. Thus he experienced a change of heart, and the sacred words that had been his father's strength and comfort, became his rod and staff, when the shadows lengthened, and he entered the dark valley of the shadow of death and he was not afraid.

A few weeks ago he chose his pallbearers, his minister and requested them to use for his service the text used at his father's funeral. A verse from that wonderful Psalm which had been in the hearts of so many of God's chosen ones when they entered the dark valley.

The funeral services were held at the late home on Tuesday, July 19, conducted by Rev. Mr. Cooper, of Richmondale, and Rev. Mr. Haas, of Lilly Chapel, Madison county. Interment in Jackson township cemetery, Pickaway county.

THIN OIL MAKES BANDS GRAB

After the oil in the crankcase becomes diluted with gas and is thin the motor is not properly lubricated and the transmission bands have a tendency to grab. The oil should be drained every 500 or 600 miles to obtain the best results from your motor. Let us drain the oil and put in a gallon of WARCO, the proper lubricant for your Ford car that eliminates band chatter.

Goose Quill Thrives Among Paris Writers

Paris.—The typewriter today is generally accepted by American authors as the quickest and most satisfactory method of setting their thoughts on paper. But in France, where art is still spelled with a capital letter, much of the literary output is from quill pens. The goose quill is a standard article at stationery stores.

The importance of quills came to light recently when a newspaper conducted a campaign among writers to discover whether they were music lovers. Many of the literary people asserted that to their ears the sweetest music was the squeaking of their quill pens.

Such Ignorance

A farmer's boy brought a cowhide to the village produce dealer and asked what the price was for hides.

"Is it a green hide?" asked the dealer.

FOLKSBURG ITEMS

Several people from other places have been visiting their relatives in Folksburg lately, and some of them we can impress a good deal showing them the sights of our town, while others from bigger places, why we mostly urge them just to take a good rest out in the back yard and quiet their jumpy nerves. From which you might say we've got something to offer any of them.

Sidney Moon's daughter, Minnie, is wanting to go up to the city and spend a week or two with some people she knows. But Sidney is trying to talk her out of it for the reason that he knows she'll come back with a lot of new ideas that'll cost him money.

It sure has been hot in Folksburg since our last writing, and it seems like we never did see the heat waves sizzling down the way they have been along about noon every day. And several have claimed they can smell burning rubber all over town from rubber heels being scorched on the sidewalks.

Andy Dobbins is still somewhat concerned over the report that he said we needed a new Town Board. He's afraid it might work out against him on his job of carrying the mail back and forth to the postoffice, and he claims all he said was that we've got a sure enough self-governed town, which he didn't mean in any derogatory sense toward anybody.

Miss Mellie Robbins got a crick in her neck yesterday that was very painful for a while. And how it happened was she was trying to turn her head around too much to see did her new slippers look all right behind.

Earl Smiley was over at Albany last Saturday, and he's been telling how he met several people that he seemed to attract their attention so much. He wondered modestly if they thought he had a distinguished look, but Sam Price told him it might be they thought he resembled somebody there's a reward out for.

Somebody mentioned recently that most people nowadays all follow the fixed style, and try to look and act as near alike as they can except for a few things like the color of their eyes or their waist measure which they can't change. And seems like nobody has the nerve to come out and be themselves the way they once did. Which maybe it's a good thing, but it limits the subjects for conversation a lot.

Mrs. Felix Cobb is spending the week over at Nashville. And before she started Felix asked her to write back and tell him what she thought of the place, which she did soon after she got there by sending a card saying she wished she was back home.

Lewis Jackson got another letter yesterday from his boy, Charlie, who is up in the city, and it said he had lost his job. And the reason was that where he worked the boss was in and out a good deal, and Charlie couldn't seem to get on to the knack of beating the boss back in by a minute or two.

Frank Fillmore, who moved to Newport a few years ago, visited in Folksburg last week. He was complaining some that he's only making $5.50 a day where he works now, and he can't see how he's going to support his family on that. And then somebody remarked that he surely can't manage as good as his father, who raised a family of ten over in Polk county, and never did make over a dollar a day in his life.

Harry Harmon sold his fiver the other day to a party east of town, and the way it's been running since he let it go, he's worried that he sold it too cheap. He'd feel a lot relieved if it would take a few spells like it used to, and not act so dependable.

AMUSEMENTS

In the role of Rosie O'Reilly, the bewitching belle of Tenth avenue, the diminutive dynamic Clara unfurls some new folds in the banner of fame that spread for her when "IT was flashed on the screens of the world.

"Rough House Rosie" has more action, tense drama and clever comedy crowded into it than five average motion pictures. No word that can be said would speak too highly of it.

From the opening sequence at the amusement beach to the rousing pugilistic encounter at the end "Rough House Rosie" held its audience enthralled. Sandwiched in between are dances, gay parties, bathing pool bits and even one where the innocent and highly indignant Clara spends a night in jail.

Reed Howes gives a fine performance as Joe Hennessey while Doris Hill shows visual evidence of why she is a Paramount contract actress. Others in the supporting cast are Arthur Housman, Douglas Gilmore, Henry Kolker, the Leon Lambert of Bebe Daniels' "A Kiss in a Taxi" and John Miljan.

Frank Strayer, brilliant young director, transferred the story to the screen. It is an adaptation by Max Marcin of Nunnally Johnson's Saturday Evening Post success. The scenario was written by Louise Long and Ethel Doherty.

WILL VISIT "LOST WORLD" OF NOVEL

American Museum Expedition Will Explore Place.

New York.—The scene of Conan Doyle's famous novel and movie, "The Lost World," will be visited and its animal life studied this summer by T. D. Carter and G. H. H. Tate of the American Museum of Natural History, in their expedition to Mount Roraima, Brazil, under the auspices of Lee Garnett Day.

Mount Roraima, which is in the northern tip of Brazil bordering on British Guiana, is an ancient district geologically. With some of the country south of the Amazon it formed a continent ages before the formation of the rest of South America. This was long before the existence of the Amazon river. Later the Amazon divided the old continent, and new land appeared, forming the South America of today.

Mount Roraima consists of a plain from which rises a sugar-loaf mountain with sharp cliffs. The geological structure of the plain differs from that of the mountain. The plain is thought to date back to the preterozoic era, one of the earliest periods in which life is known to have existed. The mountain, however, is of red sandstone, probably of the Jurassic period of the age of reptiles, a much later time.

Because of the early formation of this land, Mount Roraima became one of the first strongholds for mammals and birds when they appeared upon the earth. Little is known of the present-day animal life of this region and it is hoped that the expedition will bring to light some interesting species. The dinosaurs and pterodactyls of Conan Doyle's romance have, of course, been dead for many ages, but relics of archaic mammalian and bird faunas probably haunt the region still.

Mythical Prophetess

Mother Shipton, the reputed English prophetess, is said to have lived in the time of Henry VIII. She is first heard of in 1641 in a pamphlet called "The Prophecies of Mother Shipton." Later many verses of "prophecy" were ascribed to her, and there is room for doubt that she ever existed.

Fight Promoter Proclaims Dempsey-Sharkey Fight the Best Ever.

New York, July 22.—(UP.)—Proclaiming the fight between Jack Dempsey and Jack Sharkey the greatest he had ever seen, Tex Rickard today turned his attention toward the promotion of more bouts calculated to make pugilistic history.

Unperturbed by those who claimed that before Dempsey delivered the knockout blow Thursday night the ex-champion fouled his opponent, Rickard said, "I've seen a great many of 'em but that was the first time I was up there yelling."

The promoter saw the movies of the fight and was satisfied no foul was committed.

"A right hand under the heart and a left to the jaw put Sharkey away," he said.

He said the Dempsey-Tunney fight would be held in mid-September at a place not yet selected.

Dainty Velvet Jackets for Summer Sports Wear

Virginia Lee Corbin, lovely blonde featured motion picture actress, was Hollywood's first screen artist to adopt the Parisian mode for velvet jackets for sports wear. Miss Corbin's is of brown velvet, tobacco shade, with a shoulder bow of brown taffeta and loose ties of brown flat crepe. The skirt, accordion plaited, is of two shades of brown in flat crepe.

Fashion Suggestions for the Well-Dressed Woman

Along with early summer come outdoor weddings. For the attendants nothing is more suitable than the picturesque garden-party type of frock. This may well be built on "bouffant" lines, suggests the Woman's Home Companion, in which case either taffeta or organdie is recommended. The balance is just a little in favor of organdie, because it is an essentially summery material and this year there is a certain smart bent toward cotton fabrics.

Some young women seem to possess a faculty for wearing a gingham apron or even a nightgown so that it looks like a frock. They are lucky girls. Though their clothes allowances may be meager they always look well. People are not conscious of how long they have worn a hat, because they wear it so becomingly that it never ceases to please the eye. People are not aware of the inexpensiveness of their clothes because they themselves are so much more important than anything they can possibly have on.

Smartness and good dressing are not necessarily the same thing, and neither of them implies being extreme. Being well dressed is a simpler matter than being smart. A well-dressed girl does not need to spend so much money or so much time as a smart girl. Lots of girls are well dressed who could not possibly afford to change their costumes every time the fashions change. And lots of girls are well dressed who are not adapted by physique or temperament to being or looking smart.

To be well dressed it is desirable to have been born with a sense of color and line and appropriateness, to like clothes and to be willing to take pains with them.

The initial choice of clothes is of first importance. The well-dressed woman buys carefully as few and as good clothes as possible. She buys only what suits her and her particular needs, and never buys anything that has no direct relation to something in her wardrobe.

Pique Returns for Summer Sports Dresses

Stress is being placed by the smartest designers on two materials for summer dresses. One is shantung, which is of a specially heavy type lending itself splendidly to the present silhouette, and the other is pique. It is years since the latter has been in favor, but its crisp smartness is sure to make it popular again now it has a start. Many of the pique dresses are trimmed in geometrical designs on one side in a bright color with no trimming at all on the other. Over the dress is worn a pique coat trimmed with braid of the same color as the decorations on the dress.

Luggage is an item of great concern to the well-dressed woman on voyage. She realizes that it precedes her onto the train or ship and may establish the keynote of her appearance. She selects that which is newest and smartest, but she never sacrifices convenience. One of her favorites of the season is the "mail-pouch" bag, which is the latest innovation of a famous French luggage maker. This bag is not only unusually chic, but also a perfect "last-minute" accessory, since one may slip into it everything that has been forgotten until the instant of departure.

TEACHER IS MISSING

Police Asked To Help Locate Wooster Girl Lost In South.

Wooster, O., July 22.—Police were asked here today to assist in finding Frances Beckler, 29, school teacher of Delta, O., who has strangely disappeared.

Miss Beckler, who deserted her profession a year ago to sell books, had been working through the winter at Birmingham, Ala., and came North in the spring.

At Memphis, Tenn., she received transportation to Wooster from her district manager. From Wooster she wrote her manager under date of May 1 that she was ill and not able to work. Later her mother failed to get an answer to a letter sent her, and all mail addressed to her at Wooster was returned.

Never "Talk Back" to
This Texas Policeman

Cities everywhere have their silent policemen, but they are made of stone or marble or granite. Coleman, Texas, has a silent policeman in human flesh—Rush Johnigan, fifty-year-old deaf-mute, who weighs 180 pounds, stands erect, dresses well and wears a Texas ten-gallon hat.

For seven years Johnigan has served Coleman efficiently, says the American Magazine, equipped with a .45 automatic, which he has never yet had occasion to use. Generally a tap on the back is enough to cause a law-breaker to yield to this officer, who never argues the case out of court.

Johnigan is on motor vehicle duty and has had dealings with tourists from every state in the Union. Sometimes the transgressor attempts to argue the question with him, but when he discovers he is in custody of one who can neither hear nor speak he stops talking and goes to the judge to tell it.

COWBOY IS NOW
TURNING FARMER

Rider Loses Battle Against Economic Change.

Washington.—The cowboy of the northern ranges is passing, believes Mary Roberts Rhinehart, the novelist. In her latest book, "Lost Ecstasy," she pictures the cowboy waging a losing battle against restricted range, herds of sheep and the force of economic change.

"The eastern demand for young beef and the increasing tendency of farmers in the Middle West to sell their grain on the hoof, has increased the cowboy's problem," says Mrs. Rhinehart, who has spent parts of many years in the cattle country, winter and summer. She confesses the bitterness of one to whom "the passing of the cowboy is a personal tragedy."

"For the last six years it was thought in Wyoming and Montana that the slump in prices for range stock was temporary," she continues. "But now they are realizing that the cattle industry of the old days will never return. To own cattle is, in bad years, to be poor in proportion to the number you own. And so out goes the cowhand. What is he to do? Become a farmhand?"

He was an aristocrat, a free lance whose equipment was his nerve and his skill. Now he becomes a tiller of the fields, with equipment manufactured in Chicago.

"It is not that I regard the change as a retrogression," she said. "But for the individual it is something of the sort. His skilled profession is taken away. But the blow to pride in his greatest blow."

"From being an artist in his line he must become a mere unit of man power. I have seen them, my own friends, go to driving a team in the fields or a truck between the little towns. Sometimes they take to clerking in stores."

"But when spring comes they are apt to gather up their saddles and spurs and move on. There may be little work for them left, but a rumor of it is sufficient to call them. And some of them regard it as more suitable to be a cowpuncher out of work than a farmhand making money."

Big Lava Cave of Idaho
Is Now Being Explored

Idaho Falls, Idaho.—Exploration of what is believed to be the largest lava cave in the United States has begun at Twin Buttes, west of Idaho Falls. Boy scouts of Teton Peak's council, the Idaho Falls Chamber of Commerce and others are making the exploration.

Tortuous twists and phenomenal phantasies of nature's handiwork are embellished in the tunnel.

If the cave is as large as the prospective explorers believe, southeastern Idaho will add another mark on its already well spotted map of scenic attractions and natural wonders. It is pointed out that the cave is larger than Kentucky's Mammoth cave and contains more formations than Oregon's caves along the Columbia river.

Town Limits Oil Wells
to Save Its Buildings

Oxford, Kan.—Because it appeared probable this town might have to move to make way for oil rigs, the city council has passed an ordinance limiting drilling to one well in each city block. All property owners in the block shall receive a prorated royalty in the event of production, according to their holdings in square feet.

Soon after oil was found here a feverish boom developed in town-lot oil leases and virtually every square inch of the city, except the streets and public property, was placed under lease. The opera house was torn down and an oil well started in the former basement.

When plans developed to tear down other buildings and to sink numerous wells in front yards the city stepped in and called a halt.

Australian Bushmen
Fast Vanishing Race

Washington.—The Australian bushmen apparently are preparing to join the dodo, the passenger pigeon and the mammoth in the limbo of extinction.

This aborigine has been notable chiefly by reason of the scientific conclusion that he personifies very closely the lowest standard of human culture. By comparison, the early American Indian was a model of civilization.

The decline of the bushman is noted in a report to the Commerce department from Sydney. A census just completed concludes that the death rate among them is five of each 100 annually. The latest census placed their number at 52,298.

"All over," said the Dutch waitress.

"All over what?" Jay wanted to know.

"All over with," was the final shot. —Los Angeles Times.

REMEMBER how the soft foil cigarette package replaced the pasteboard box! Well, here's the same idea applied to pipe tobacco:

JUST A SUGGESTION

The woman, after many years' devotion to old-fashioned overshoes, had finally succumbed to modish, if by no means esthetic, goloshes.

As the salesman tried on a pair of the newest zippers, the woman noted with distaste the great bulge at the top of them.

"Haven't you a pair that fit me more snugly?" she asked.

"No, madam. I'm sorry. They all come one width at the top."

"Only that you eat more potatoes, madam," he said, with a cordial smile.

I Guess You're Right

It is better to give than receive. Of a whipping this doubtless is true. But of kissing I cannot believe. It holds good till I've tried it, can you?

Woman's Intuition

A South street man, arriving home late met his wife with this:

"Can you guess where I've been, dear?"

Not Prophesying

Why Agnes Changed Her Mind

By CORONA REMINGTON

(Copyright.)

AGNES DILLINGHAM buried her curly brown head in her pillow and wept with long convulsive sobs that seemed to rack her slender body. Then followed a stillness of exhaustion, then more tears brought on by living over again the whole terrible thing in her mind.

Mrs. Dillingham, hunting her daughter all through the house, at last found her curled up in the middle of the bed that always looked so much bigger when Agnes was in it.

"Why, daughter, what is the matter?" she asked in quick alarm, putting a loving hand on the girl's heaving shoulder. "You look like a happy fiancée, I must say."

"Nothing, only John's so poor."

"So poor!" echoed Mrs. Dillingham.

"Yes. Poor! He never can buy the best seats at opera or the theater and Lucille and her fiancée always take a box and you know all of our friends have more money than John. It's so—so humiliating."

"Nonsense, Agnes. You're unreasonable. Just because Lucille's engaged to a wealthier man doesn't mean she'll be any happier than you. John's a splendid young man and he has brains, and father says he's going right up in the business world. I believe you love money more than you do, John."

"Oh, mother, how can you be so cruel! You know how I love him, but it's just so—so embarrassing. It's going to be awful after we marry. I don't know how I'll ever stand it. We'll be skimping and scratching along forever."

Quick steps on the stairs interrupted the conversation and a second later Lucille Sturtevant burst into the room with the unceremonious familiarity of an intimate friend.

"Well, what's the matter with you?" exclaimed Mrs. Dillingham.

Lucille threw her furs on a chair and flung herself into another one.

"I'm so peeved at Tom I could die!" she said angrily. "We've had a terrible fuss. I've pleaded and begged and cried and he won't budge. I doubt if we ever marry now. He's too—too selfish or something."

"Well, what has Tom done?" asked Agnes, forgetting her own troubles for a moment and sitting up in bed.

"Well, tell us," said Agnes irritably. "Don't go on raving like that. My goodness, my head's splitting now."

"I want to build in Lynnhurst. That's where all the young married couples in our set are going now, and Tom says he can't afford it. It would mean five or six servants and a fifty or sixty thousand dollar house and everything to match. And he says he'd rather build in Morning View and have the best home there than to have the cheapest home in Lynnhurst. Isn't that silly? Isn't he too unreasonable for words? I get so mad at him I could shake him. And I told him if he talked hard enough and long enough his father'd build him a house in Lynnhurst at a few thousand more just as easily as one in Morning View, but he won't do it—says he has some pride and all that rubbish. He forgets I have some pride, too."

Lucille dabbed angrily at the tears that were rolling down her cheeks. Mrs. Dillingham looked at the two girls and then she spoke.

"If I were your fiancée I'd consider you both a mighty poor risk and I wouldn't marry either of you. You'd make nice helpmates for a man if he ever needed help. Frankly, I'm sorry for both John and Tom. Why, do you know, when father and I were engaged we used to ride the street car to the park on Sundays and spend the afternoon there, and if he was feeling very flush we'd go on the merry-go-round."

Agnes laughed shrilly. "Oh, what a joke! Imagine!" she said breathlessly.

Lucille out of deference to her hostess checked her mirth somewhat but it was the same quality of derisive laughter.

That evening when Agnes' fiancée called there was something peculiar about his manner. He was as tender and affectionate as ever but somehow solemn, almost depressed.

"I've been thinking over what you said this afternoon when we were at lunch together," he began at last in a voice that was not his own, "and I've decided I have no right to marry you. I could never make you happy. You deserve some one with the greater earning capacity." The words tumbled out in a volley as if he had rehearsed his speech.

Agnes looked at him, wretched and forlorn, sitting beside her, and a quick pang of contrition swept over her.

"John," she said, her hand creeping into his. "I've been a perfect little beast. I didn't realize it before, but I know it now. It's you I want, not your old money or a grand home, and I don't care if we never go to another theater party or anything. If we can't afford anything else we can always go to the p-park and ride on the merry-go-round."

"You dear, dear ridiculous child," he laughed, sweeping her into his arms—and for the first time since their engagement Agnes was genuinely happy.

DEATH QUICKLY CLAIMS THREE VICTIMS

IN AWFUL AUTO ACCIDENT AT LEISTVILLE SATURDAY

Two Women and One Man Die From Result of Auto Collision At Intersection of Adelphi, Maysville and Zanesville Pikes, Seven Miles East of This City, Saturday Evening At 6:30 O'clock—Accident Due To Speeding Car.

In a collision of two automobiles Saturday evening at six-thirty o'clock at Leistville, one woman, Mrs. Bryan Riffle, was killed instantly and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Eliza Paxton Riffle, who was in the same car, was so badly injured internally that she died Sunday morning at six o'clock and Edward Laughlin, of Newark, was so badly hurt that he died Sunday night at midnight.

The accident, which was one of the worst in the history of the county, occurred at the intersection of the Adelphi and the Zanesville and Maysville turnpikes.

In the Riffle machine were Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Riffle and their baby, Thomas Edward, a child eight months old, their niece, Eleanor Timmons, daughter of Mrs. Lloyd Martin, and Mrs. Eliza Paxton Riffle, mother of Bryan Riffle. The last named was driving and the family was coming to this city to do their shopping.

Mr. Riffle was driving a Studebaker touring car and as he neared the cross roads, he saw bearing down on him an Essex coach coming from the east at a high rate of speed, and before he could stop, the coach rammed into his machine just as both reached the center of the intersecting highways.

Former Kingston Physician Goes to a Watery Grave Sunday.

Dr. Joseph W. Leist, formerly of Kingston, son of Amos Leist, lost his life in the Olentangy river at Columbus Sunday in an endeavor to save his son from drowning.

While Dr. Leist was battling to save the boy, two other sons, George 6, and Joseph 11, stood horrified and helpless on the bank, watching a picnic breakfast turning into a tragedy.

John, too, probably would have been a victim, had not Don Miller, 19 of Chicago, who is visiting his uncle T. J. O'Neil, 88 East Oakland avenue, arrived just after Dr. Leist slipped from a ledge into deep water and left John floundering. Miller completed the rescue of John, who was little the worse for his experience.

Dr. Leist had been in the water 10 or 15 minutes and after gaining a footing on the ledge had stood there with the water around his shoulder holding John in safety. When he slipped off into the deeper water he was too exhausted to make further fight for life. The body remained in the water about 45 minutes before being recovered.

With his three boys, Dr. Leist went to the riverside for an early outdoor breakfast, expecting to return home about 10 o'clock. While he was preparing breakfast at 7 a. m. the boys wandered down to the river's brink. A moment later he was attracted by the screams of the two brothers that John was in the water.

Without hesitation the father plunged in to rescue his son. Because of the early morning hour the neighborhood was deserted.

Dr. Leist was born at Kingston and was a graduate of Bellevue hospital, New York. He was assistant professor in the medical college at Ohio State university. His widow, Mrs. Laura Leist, his father, Amos Leist, Kingston; a half brother, Robert Leist, Cleveland and a half sister, Mrs. James Wright, also survive.

Relieving Body's Tension

French gymnastics are to make the body flexible and to free it from habits of muscular tension, and relaxing exercises are used. These consist in making absolutely limp one part of the body after another, and finally the whole at once by removing all tension from the articulation. These exercises are followed by a series of energizing or vitalizing movements, slow and rhythmic.
